2 STARTERS IN MATCH RACE

SWEET MARIE, HOLDER OF RECORD.

TIVERTON

Withdrawn at last moment from great three-cornered trotting match at Readville this afternoon.

Tiverton, Withdrawn at Last Moment on Account of Weak Leg, Leaves Contest Between Sweet Marie and Wentworth.

By Edward E. Cogswell.

READVILLE RACE TRACK, July 7.—The big three-cornered match race between Sweet Marie, Wentworth and Tiverton dissolved itself into a two-horse affair, as at the last moment Tiverton was withdrawn on account of lameness.

Soon after arriving at Readville from Poughkeepsie he showed symptoms of favoring the hind ankle opposite to the one he nearly broke down in last year.

John Howell was in hopes that by going slow with the gelding he would round to all right in time for the race. In place of this he continued to grow worse, till it was necessary to call in the services of Dr. Lee.

Immediately the doctor, after a thorough examination, ordered Tiverton to be given absolute rest so far as track work was considered, walking exercise morning and night being its extreme limit.

Furthermore, he informed Howell that the gelding would not be in condition to be jogged even for at least three weeks, if an absolute breakdown was to be prevented.

Asked about Tiverton, Howell said the following:

"It is needless to tell how terribly disappointed I am at not being able to start the gelding. In the early training last Spring I was particularly careful in his work, being afraid of his going wrong in the leg that went down last year.

"With such care Tiverton progressed

THAW THREATENED TO KILL WIFE; NEW CHARGE

MADDENED BY CONFESSION OF HER LIFE WITH WHITE, ONLY YIELDED TO HER TEARS.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 7.—That Harry Kendall Thaw, who killed Stanford White, the noted architect, thrust a revolver against the head of beautiful Evelyn Nesbit in a paroxysm of anger and chagrin, and threatened to kill her when she first revealed to him the part White had played in her life, was one of the sensational charges, it was learned to-day, in the affidavit which she is alleged to have signed as the first step in an action for breach of promise.

It was only her piteous pleading at the time that dissuaded Thaw from his determination, and saved him then from having blood on his own head.

Under Torture Tests.

The sensational contents of the affidavit were learned by Assistant District Attorney Garvan to-day. The affidavit was subsequently destroyed, but it has become known that a photograph of the affidavit exists and is now in the possession of a prominent lawyer of this city. It is of a nature that prevents its publication.

Torture tests like those to which the Terranova girl and Berthe Claiche were subjected are being applied to Harry Thaw by expert alienists, and upon their expected report of insanity his lawyers will base his defence.

He is being subjected to all the known tests under the direction of Dr. Allan MacLane Hamilton, an alienist who has figured in many important murder trials. He made a mental and physical examination of Thaw in the Tombs yesterday, despite the protests of Thaw and his lawyer, Judge Olcott, and continued the examination to-day.

Put Thaw to Severe Tests.

The examination of Thaw yesterday lasted more than an hour. Every known test, covering both the physical and mental state of Thaw, was applied and the conclusions reached by Dr. Hamilton will be submitted to Judge Olcott and a number of alienists, who will use it as a basis for further investigation.

Dr. Hamilton visited Thaw in the Tombs again to-day and resumed his examination of the young millionaire. Mrs. Thaw, the prisoner's wife, reached the prison about 10:30 o'clock. She was compelled to wait pending the completion of Dr. Hamilton's examination before being allowed to see her husband.

Guard Mrs. Thaw.

Lawyer R. E. Peck, representing former Governor Black, of the firm which will defend Thaw in his trial, was also an early caller upon Thaw. He went over Thaw's morning mail with him and carried away from the Tombs four or five of the letters which Thaw received to-day. Mr. Peck asked Warden Flynn not to allow any of the women missionaries about the Tombs to talk to Mrs. Thaw and the warden promised to do so, saying that the missionaries had no right to interfere in a case where charity was not needed.

SHERIFF HAS WARRANT TO ARREST JOHN D.

FINDLAY, Ohio, July 7.—Sheriff E. L. Groves, armed with Judge Banker's warrant for John D. Rockefeller and other Standard Oil Company officials, has gone to Cleveland, and it is understood he has made preparations for an indefinite stay. It is expected he will remain as long as there is any hope that the oil magnate will return to that city.

Since Judge Banker decided that the Probate Court has jurisdiction to try Rockefeller and his trust under the Valentine anti-trust law, discussion has been general as to the probable outcome in case he is brought to Findlay.

Judge Banker, who would hear the cases, has the reputation of being fearless. His constituents are practically unanimous in the opinion that in case conviction is procured he would impose upon Rockefeller the only sentence which can hurt him—a prison term.

Under the law punishment is a fine of from $500 to $50,000 or imprisonment of from six to twelve months, or both.

SODA TANK BLOWS UP; WRECKS STORE; 1 HURT

MEMBER OF WESTFIELD DRUG FIRM IS BADLY INJURED BY EXPLOSION.

Special to the Boston American.

WESTFIELD, July 7.—The explosion of a tank of soda water in the drug store of Prout & Judson on Elm street to-day badly wrecked the store, shook up several customers and seriously injured George E. Judson, the junior member of the firm.

Judson was in the basement charging the tank of water with carbonic acid gas, when the explosion occurred, caused by a failure of the indicator to show the amount of pressure which was on the tank. The explosion, which had the force of several hundred pounds pressure, hurled Judson against the wall, breaking his arm in two places and causing internal injuries, and blew out a portion of the floor of the drug store, wrecking the fixtures and causing a panic among the people in the store.

PICKED UP ADRIFT IN DORY.

ST. JOHN, N. B., July 7.—R. R. Bolke of the crew of the schooner Florence, who while fishing from a dory lost his vessel in a fog, was picked up by the schooner Henry H. Chamberlain and brought into port yesterday.

DOCTOR HELD IN $5,000 FOR ATTACK ON GIRL

Judge Orders Waltham Physician Investigated by the Grand Jury.

Charged with attacking Marguerite Murphy, aged fifteen years, a High School pupil living in Newtonville, Dr. Nicholas W. Cousins, a popular and fashionable physician of Crescent street, Waltham, was to-day held for the Grand Jury by Judge Luce of the Waltham District Court in $5,000 bail. The doctor, who denies the charges made by the girl, furnished sureties.

Marguerite Murphy is the daughter of James Murphy, a carpenter of Newtonville. She charges that the alleged attack occurred in the doctor's office three weeks ago when she went to be treated for indigestion. In holding Dr. Cousins for the Grand Jury, Judge Luce said: "In my mind there is no doubt of the guilt of the respondent."

61 DEPORTED ON WHITE STAR LINER TO-DAY

Carrying back what is believed to be the largest number of deported immigrants ever sent from this port, sixty-one in all, the White Star Liner Romanic sailed to-day at 11:15 o'clock for the Azores and Mediterranean ports. She carried 275 saloon and 500 steerage passengers.

Practically the whole North End populace turned out to bid farewell to ex-Representative A. A. Badaracco, who was formerly on the School Committee of this city, and who, with Mrs. Badaracco and their five children, were passengers on the ship. Friends and acquaintances lined the dock and cheered, while a large number followed abreast of the ship in launches and every conceivable kind of craft until she was well out.

A party of 140 Christian Endeavorers, under the direction of A. P. Albino of New York, were also aboard. They will land at Genoa, from whence they intend making the trip to Geneva, Switzerland, where the world's conference of Christian Endeavor societies takes place this month.

Among the other saloon passengers were Professor and Mrs. Lionel Marks of Harvard, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Geiger, Jr., Dr. Frank W. Lyons of South Boston and the Rev. Alexander McKenzie of Cambridge.

MORE LEADERS BOOM MORAN FOR GOVERNOR

BOSTON MEN COME OUT STRONG FOR THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

The names of these ward leaders and others prominent in the work of the Democratic party in Boston have been added to-day to those who have announced themselves in favor of the nomination of John B. Moran for Governor of Massachusetts:

Senator John J. Gartland, of the Fourth Suffolk District, Ward 9.

Frank O'Hare, chairman of Ward 14 Democratic Committee.

Alderman Patrick Bowen, Ward 9.

Street Commissioner James A. Gallivan, Ward 13.

Chairman Hickey, Ward 15.

Thomas F. Phelan, Ward 17.

Former Alderman Michael W. Norris, a factor in Ward 13, while not expressing a preference, declares that he doesn't see how Moran's nomination can be prevented.

Senator John J. Gartland of the Fourth Suffolk District, whose political prophecies in the past have made him famous, made this statement at City Hall to-day: "I want to prophecy that John B. Moran will be the next Democratic candidate for Governor. They can't stop him. Just write that down and see how near right I am.

"We have not canvassed the Ward 9 committee, but I am one of the committee, and I am for Moran, and I know that some of the others feel the same way."

"They Can't Stop Him."

"What is true in Ward 14 I think is true in all parts of the city among the common people. They like the man who dares strike at the high as well as the low and who shows no favors to any class. I think Moran would get practically the solid labor vote as against any candidate likely to be named. With the conditions existing to-day continued up to the day of election Moran would be elected Governor."

Thomas F. Phelan, of Ward 17, who was chief lieutenant to Representative Theodore A. Glynn, who defeated the Curleys and won his place in the House of Representatives, declares that Ward 17 will go for Moran. He says:

Calls Moran "on the Level."

"John B. Moran's candidacy should be given an attentive ear by all who favor equal and exact justice between man and man. There is no divided will in John Moran's make up. His every act shows that he is on the level. I am confident that Ward 17 will be for him in the primaries."

Street Commissioner James A. Gallivan, of Ward 13, says: "I think the trend of popular sentiment is strongly toward Moran."

Alderman John A. Baldwin, of Ward 14, said: "There is plenty of Moran sentiment in South Boston."

Chairman Hickey, of the Ward 15 committee: "I have always been with Moran myself, but I cannot speak for the ward organization. He will be nominated and elected in my opinion."

Patrick Bower, leader of the Fitzgerald forces in Ward 9, says: "With him?" repeated the ex-Alderman, "sure I'm with him. The John F. Fitzgerald Club, you can state, will endorse him unanimously the coming week."

CAMILLE CLIFFORD, A SLAVEY 5 YEARS AGO, NOW FIANCEE OF BARON'S HEIR

CAMILLE CLIFFORD IN ROLE IN WHICH SHE WON FORTUNE BY HER WALK

Meteoric Rise of Norwegian Girl — Who Made Her First Success by Her Walk.

FROM the humble position of a laundry girl and household slavey to the envied eminence of an American and English pet of the stage and then to become the fiancee of a real lord, all within four years—that is the wonderful romance of beautiful Camille Clifford, who started in the magic path that led her to fame and fortune from a modest home in the Roxbury section of Boston.

The announcement has just been flashed under the waters of the Atlantic that Miss Clifford is to wed the Hon. Henry Lundhurst Bruce, eldest son of Lord Aberdare, and a lieutenant in a Hampshire regiment. There are objections on the part of the young man's father, but it is said that these will not be permitted to interfere with the happy ending of this love story.

CHAPTER I.

"Goodby, Camille, be a good girl."

"Goodby, Camille—goodby! Goodby!"

Camille nodded, blushed and smiled. She waved her hands. She said something in Swedish, for she could not speak English. It meant goodby to the kind friends she was leaving on the steamer Pavonia after the ship docked at this port, July 1, five years ago.

And that was Camille Ottersen's arrival in this country. She was small, very pretty and only fifteen. Her eyes were large and as blue as the sky, her hair as golden as the sun. Although a steerage passenger, her beauty had made her a favorite on the boat among the wealthier travelers and they had made her trip a pleasant one. It was the sea trip friends who were wishing her well as they parted at the dock.

Camille waited and watched wistfully. She thought that her father might meet her. He did not. Mrs. John M. Schilling of No. 14 Pontiac street, Boston, found the little girl.

"You are Camille," said Mrs. Schilling. "Come home with me."

CHAPTER II.

Camille had always been used to hard work. When she reached Mrs. Schilling's hospitable home, she did not change her program. But one thing she did change—her name. There was a "Clifford" in her family, and she substituted that for "Ottersen." The little girl was determined to become Americanized at once.

For a time she worked in the house and then in a laundry. Neither satisfied her ambition. Mrs. Simon J. Carey, the wife of a wealthy Orange, N. J., man, wanted a maid for the Summer at Falmouth. She saw Camille and became captivated by her face.

In the wealthy family at the seaside there was a chance for the natural talent of the girl to expand and for her imagination to act. Mrs. Carey liked the girl so well that she took her to her home.

But the voice of the city called to the little girl. The bright lights, sweet sounds and lively ways allured her. So Camille returned to Boston and to Mrs. Schilling in March of 1901.

C APTER III.

As the Summer of 1901 came on Camille looked for other and more congenial employment. For a time she was disappointed. She became a seamstress in a Boylston shop, but was not content to spend her life plying the needle.

One day she saw an advertisement for "supes" at the Park Theatre. The play was "Morocco Bound." But the play was not the thing—to get on the stage, that was her ambition. The footlights had beckoned to her from the first time she had sat breathless in a theatre.

And when she entered the Park Theatre as one of the great throng that bounded on the stage and did nothing but look as pretty as they could she got her feet on the ladder. She resolved to climb.

Henry W. Savage was organizing the "Prince of Pilsen" company. He saw Camille Clifford. His experienced eye took in her possibilities—partly. She was engaged for the chorus. Her beauty was chiefly responsible for this. But after a time she was dropped. There was no reason given. But the tiny feet of the pretty girl were firmly on the ladder.

CHAPTER IV.

Mr. Savage, the noted impresario, is always on the lookout for talent. He lives on talent and beauty. A stylish looking girl with a pretty face and a fine figure on the stage appealed to him. She was giving a wonderfully graceful and chic impersonation of a typical American girl, as depicted by Gibson.

Pet of London Stage Engaged to Wed Eldest Son of Lord Aberdare.

"By George," said Savage to himself, "she's all right."

Then he looked at his programme.

"Miss Camille Clifford."

Then Mr. Savage did a little thinking. The name was the same as his Boston chorus girl. But how she had improved within the short months since she had "got through" with him.

"I must have an interview with that girl," remarked the wise Mr. Savage.

He did. And Camille returned to the "Prince of Pilsen." But not in the chorus.

CHAPTER V.

Who hasn't seen Camile Clifford in the "Prince of Pilsen" as "The Gibson Girl," has missed a treat.

All the young and stunningly handsome Gotham girl did was walk across the stage. She did not speak a word. There was nothing peculiar about her walk—except that it was the walk of the New York girl.

And everybody at once fell in love with the walk. It was a poem of grace. It had the swing and rhythm of music. The house looked with admiring eyes and then thundered its applause.

Never had such a walk been seen on the stage before. And that walk made the pretty girl's fortune. It took New York and London by storm. It made Camille Clifford the pet of the footlights.

CHAPTER VI.

Miss Clifford, now with her aunt in Washington, was in London last season with the "Catch of the Season" company. She sang a song called "The Matinee Hat." It is said to suit her saucy, piquant face and laughing blue eyes.

But she hasn't forgotten the walk!

It was the walk and the hat together that captured the heart of Lord Bruce. And she will utilize both of them when she leads him to the altar.

THE END.

NO SERPENT IN SANFORD'S Ginger to sting you with remorse. No other stimulant so healthful.

CHURCHILL TO TAKE STUMP AGAINST LOBBY

Novelist Will Make Whirlwind Campaign for Governorship of New Hampshire.

CORNISH, N. H., July 7.—Winston Churchill, the novelist, is going to take the stump immediately and work a whirlwind campaign for the purpose of promoting his boom for Governor.

A meeting of the Lincoln Club will be held on Monday, at which arrangements for his tour of the State will be perfected.

Mr. Churchill's announcement that he is a candidate for the Governorship has caused a sensation in the State. His platform is a popular one with the mass of voters. He intends to head a reform movement to wrest the State from the control of the Boston & Maine Railroad and place it in the hands of the people, where it belongs.

Mr. Churchill's attack on the railroad and its lobby began in his latest novel, "Coniston," in which he exposes what is acknowledged to be the condition of political corruption which now obtains in the Granite State. It is this book which has won the support of the Lincoln Club of Concord to his candidacy and which, if he gains the Republican nomination, will be largely responsible.

Chafing Under Domination.

Mr. Churchill is intensely in earnest. He believes that the time has come to better conditions in the State, and that the only way to attain this end is to smash the railroad's power.

"The people of New Hampshire are chafing under railroad domination," he said. "This movement was organized for the specific purpose of smashing the railroad lobby and for that reason only."

Speaking of his proposed method of campaigning Mr. Churchill said:

"Publicity will be our great weapon. We do not propose to buy newspapers nor to get behind the barn. The Lincoln Club will expand and will organize branches in each community. The movement has begun already, and I am assured that the project is being taken up by the voters of the State with great enthusiasm. It is the first step towards good government and relief from the lobby that has dominated the State for years."

To Abolish the Lobby.

Mr. Churchill makes the issue direct between the people of the State of New Hampshire and all corporations which take a hand in the politics of the State, notably the Boston & Maine Railroad.

Should he win the nomination, his platform will pledge the enactment of laws which will give the people better control of the government of the State, a direct primary law, a law to abolish the lobby, and a law along the line of that enacted by the Federal government to remedy the evils which attend the free pass system.

The campaign is already on. From now until September, when the Republican convention will be held, Mr. Churchill will devote all his time to spreading his propaganda from the stump.

A Campaign of Instruction.

It will be partly a campaign of instruction, as Mr. Churchill feels that a large percentage of the voters of the State do not realize how completely it is dominated by the railroad. This, he says, is because the voters do not take an active interest in politics, not because of lack of intelligence. He believes that when the real situation is presented to them they will see what should be done and will do it.

The whole system is wrong, he declares, and only the people themselves can remedy it. The great task to be performed, he says, is to arouse the voters so that they will go to the caucuses and nominate their own candidates instead of having them nominated by the railroad and its henchmen.

NEW FLOATING HOSPITAL BOAT IS LAUNCHED

Is 50 Per Cent. Larger Than Old Boat and Takes Care of 350 Patients.

Boston's new floating hospital was launched at 11:43 a. m. to-day from the Atlantic Works, East Boston, without any ceremony whatever, although a large crowd of friends of the institution was present. The formal ceremonies will take place on July 20, when the boat goes into commission. The new boat took the water easily and the launching was smoothly and successfully conducted. When in commission the boat will be anchored at the North End Pier, where she will accommodate 350 patients, as she is 50 per cent. larger than the old boat.

At the launching to-day were Chairman Edward R. Warren, Vice-Chairman Edward W. Pope and Trustees Charles W. Jaynes and William H. Brainerd and Manager G. Loring Briggs, as well as many others who are patrons of the enterprise.

The new Boston Floating Hospital for children is 171 feet in length, 44 feet in beam. She has a steel hull with seven water-tight compartments. The superstructure is of wood, with four decks, the main, hospital, out-patients and pilot house. The boat is unique in construction, having a flat bottom, with three keels. She is built with all the advantages of the old hospital and with her disadvantages eliminated so far as possible.

The trustees of the floating hospital have received many good offers for the old boat, but have come to no decision as yet. It is possible that the scope of the work may be extended, so that the old boat will be made use of.

OTHER SINS WORSE THAN MURDER, SAYS JULIAN HAWTHORNE

EVOLUTION OF A BEAUTY WHOSE CHARMS LED TO A TRAGEDY WHICH SHOCKED THE WORLD.

Harry Thaw, Slayer of White, Not Yet Proved Guilty of Crime—Publicity Cure for Society Evils.

By Julian Hawthorne.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 7.—That Thaw killed White, we know; whether or not he murdered him has still to be proved. Doubtless he believed he had justifying provocation; for the scene of the crime is not such as would be chosen by a deliberate and prudent assassin. Thaw may, indeed, be some sort of a homicidal maniac, and White have been but a benevolent, easy-going, elderly gentleman, seeking distraction from intellectual preoccupations in harmless social diversions, and we may admit, in any case, that private killing is not the right form of retaliation for private wrongs in a civilized community, be "the unwritten law" what it may.

But whether the victim in this particular case turns out to have been guilty or innocent of what Thaw thought he killed him for, there is no doubt that there is a strong feeling in the community that the sort of practices of which White is accused is intolerable in any society and more fatal to the existence of society than murder itself.

How Is Sin to Be Checked?

In the midst of the agitation caused by Thaw's deed, the even more revolting case of Short has emerged; and the intimation is patent that things are doing beneath our relatively smooth surface too wicked and loathsome to be publicly discussed. But how are they to be checked?

They are necessarily veiled and secret, and those who could testify to them are inevitably the very persons who will best consult their safety by keeping silent. And without legal evidence the law cannot indict, much less convict. Thousands may know the truth; tens of thousands may have been creditably informed of it; but the first will not tell, and what the others may tell has no value in a court. So that the very depravity of the crimes may render them unpunishable.

There is only one way to check them, and perhaps to stop them, and that is by the terror created in the miscreants by the publicity afforded by the public press. The miscreant whose name gets into print is done for. He can stand up against private gossip; he may even survive a trial in court, but newspapers, served by trained reporters, making investigations, publishing results, unearthing facts, pushing, penetrating, prying and inaccessible to bribes, are the most effective discouragers of vice in the world. And the greatest friend in the world of vice and crime is the man who would suppress discussion of these things (so far as they may without too much offence be publicly discussed) in what he calls the interests of pure-mindedness.

The devil loves such a man more even than he loves the unnatural profligate. All the devil asks is to be let alone, and if he can persuade you that, unless he be let alone, he will make devils of all our innocents, he shrieks with joy. The newspapers are very shocking, to be sure; they publish shocking things; we do not like to see our sons and daughters reading such things. But is it not infinitely better that they read such things than run the risk of suffering such things as they read of?

"Devil Hates Newspapers."

The devil hates newspapers; and the "yellower" they are, the worse he hates them. Some innocent persons may indeed be corrupted by reading of wickedness, but innocence is negative; good persons will not be corrupted, for goodness is positive. Those who fall had the propensities for evil in them, ready to emerge at the first incentive.

Far better that the publicity which acts as an incentive to them should act, at the same time, as a deterrent to the actively criminal and vicious, than that it should come to them in the form of a secret enticement to vice, which destroys them without helping or terrorizing any one.

There are eruptive diseases of the body which can be driven in by the application of certain lotions and the skin left smooth. But the eruptions, driven from the skin, attack the vital organs and become promptly fatal. If there be—and there is—disease in our community our only salvation is to force it to the surface. It will not make us look pretty, but it will save our souls alive. If we suppress it we may wear a comely appearance for a while, but the price will be that paid by Sodom and Gomorrah.

Did Evelyn Nesbit Accuse Thaw? What Principals Say

SCHIOLOFSKI MUST DIE MONDAY MORNING

GOVERNOR GUILD DENIES PETITION OF 5,000 FOR MONTH'S REPRIEVE.

John Schidlofski must die Monday morning shortly after midnight in the electric chair in the State Prison at Charlestown.

Every hope for life for the miserable and shrinking man has fled.

Warden Bridges and his force of assistants are to-day making the final preparations for the last grim chapter in the life of the man who butchered his wife to death and who fled to La Junta, Colorado, where, through the BOSTON AMERICAN, after the State police had failed, he was captured.

Governor Guild has refused to grant the petition signed by 5,000 persons which was circulated by Dr. John A[illegible] and his wife, which besought him to give the prisoner another month of life that his sanity might be finally determined.

Doctors Report Man Sane.

At the request of the executive Dr. Jelly and the jail physician of East Cambridge, Dr. Edward R. Utley, visited Schidlofski in the East Cambridge jail and reported that they believed the doomed man to be entirely sane.

That sealed the doom of Schidlofski and the Governor has refused to stay the execution of the law's extreme sentence—death in the electric chair.

Schidlofski to-day is sitting, groaning and mumbling, in the same death cell which was so recently occupied by Charles Louis Tucker, who died for the murder of Mabel Page.

Schidlofski, who has now been in the State prison for a week, is in a very feeble condition, having collapsed from the constant worry at the approach of the time set for his electrocution and his refusal to eat solid food. His brother, Dominic, visited him yesterday, but was told by the condemned man to go away, that he did not want to talk with him. Dominic tried to get his brother's consent to see a priest, but this the prisoner would not give, and after a short time Dominic left him.

Why Petition Was Refused.

Governor Guild in his formal letter to Dr. Jacob C. Goldsmit, who presented the long petition for clemency for the prisoner, said in denying their request:

"The crime of which Schidlofski was found guilty, the murder of his wife, was one executed with such extreme atrocity and cruelty as under the law to justify a verdict of murder in the first degree, even if proof of premeditation had not also been shown.

"Not one of the physicians called independently or otherwise testified under oath that the prisoner was insane.

"I have recently had the prisoner reexamined by one of the most noted alienists in the world and by the skilled physician who has been in constant attendance on the prisoner since his arrest. Their report is that he was sane at the time of his trial and conviction, and believe that he is sane now."

'JERE' HOURIN OUT FOR SENATE

Former Councilman Jeremiah J. Hourin, after a long absence from City Hall, where he was once a familiar figure, appeared among the politicians to-day long enough to announce that he was a candidate for the nomination for Senator from the district comprising Wards 18, 19 and 22.

This is a strong Democratic district and the candidates thus far announced are Representative John J. Butler in Ward 18, William A. Clark in Ward 22 and the "incorruptible Jere" in Ward 22.

"I intend to stand with Moran and in aiding him I shall aid myself. Moran will win and I hope to do the same," says Hourin.

An X-ray machine was used in hopes of locating the gem in the girl, but it has never been recovered.

TAGGART'S MONTE CARLO DEFENCE KNOCKED OUT

Governor of Indiana Declares Stern Warfare on Gambling Dens of French Lick Order.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WINONA LAKE, Ind., July 7.—Governor Hanly has delivered a broadside into the camp of Democratic National Chairman Tom Taggart, whose gambling den at French Lick Springs has been raided and closed and who is trying to "explain" that he had nothing at all to do with the maintenance of a gaming casino on his own property.

The Governor tears Taggart's attempted defence into tatters. He leaves no doubt as to his position, which is one of unalterable opposition to the resorts, and it is believed that their doom is sealed unless some unforseen thing should come to the front which would tie the State's hands.

The Governor said:

Close Dens If Possible.

"I promised the people of Indiana last September in a public address that the Monte Carlo at French Lick and West Baden should be closed, if it could be done lawfully. I gathered information through special representatives, upon which to base an action similar to that filed this week, and would have instituted proceedings then, but was assured that gambling would cease and that the law would not be further violated.

"The evidence gathered last year of itself, though valuable, was not sufficient upon which to predicate an action in the courts. I therefore proceeded to collect, through representatives sent to both casinos, the necessary evidence upon which to found the present proceedings.

"This work was completed only last week and laid before Attorney-General Miller. I had been in consultation with him from the beginning and had been advised by him concerning the State's legal rights and the authority of the executive in the premises.

"We shall now learn whether the management of the French Lick Springs Hotel Company and the West Baden Hotel Company is above the law."

BY SIDNEY C. TOPP.

Presidential Elector from Georgia, Author and Member of the Atlanta Bar.

ATLANTA, July 7.—Much has been said as to Thomas Taggart's gambling house at French Lick Springs, Ind. The papers have written much, too. If such a house exists, it is but natural that much should be said about it.

The Democratic party has honored Mr. Taggart. He is the chairman of the National Committee of that party—its official head. I am a Democrat of the old Jeffersonian school. I want to see the principles of that party prevail. I was a member of the Electoral College from Georgia, which voted for Parker and Davis in the last Presidential election. Mr. Taggart was then chairman of the party.

It is not natural that I should say anything that would be injurious to the party unless necessary. But I recently visited French Lick Springs. I had heard so much about the Taggart gambling house that I thought I would investigate for myself. I did so. There is a gambling house on the grounds where Taggart's hotel is located.

The French Lick Springs are inclosed, the hotel and this gambling house are in the same grounds, and they are connected and are the property of the same corporation, of which Mr. Taggart is the chief owner and manager.

Saw Girls Learn to Gamble.

If he does not run the gambling house in person, he must rent it out and receive the proceeds therefrom; he must be the beneficiary of this gambling house. He must know it is going on, and consent thereto.

It is a gambling house, and a gambling house on a large scale. I went into it. I saw the gambling going on. I saw the money exchanged. I saw both men and women gambling. I saw fair girls learning to gamble in this house, run either directly or indirectly by the chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

I was there on the Sunday when members of the National Press Association visited the Springs as Mr. Taggart's guests. On that day the gambling house was closed, only to be opened next day—closed because if left open the Press Association would herald it to the country.

Demands That Taggart Resign.

I am not discussing Mr. Taggart personally. I am discussing his gambling house, and I say he should do one or two things—close the place or resign as chairman of the Democratic National Committee. The dignity of the party requires it. Its own self-respect should require it. The common rule of propriety should suggest one or the other course to Mr. Taggart. No man has a right—who has been honored as he has by a great party—to retain such a position and run a gambling hell at the same time.

Either close up the gambling hell, Mr. Taggart, or resign. The party demands it.

In the Matter of Mr. Taggart

From To-day's New York World.

Mr. Thomas Taggart is mistaken in assuming that The World "has allowed itself to be imposed upon by the false and scandalous publications of a rival newspaper whose editor is my personal enemy for reasons best known to himself." The World has been governed in this matter not by what some New York or Chicago newspaper has said, but by what the Governor and Attorney General of Indiana have done.

Mr. Taggart as president of the hotel company may have had nothing whatever to do with the management of the casino. He may not know the difference between a poker chip and a Sunday school tract and may honestly believe that roulette is a form of parlor golf. The fact remains that, as the Indianapolis News says, "all over the country French Lick has been advertised as the Monte Carlo of the United States" and the laws of Indiana "have been contemptuously flouted and set aside by these gamblers and their partners and beneficiaries." The Democratic party has enough troubles without being compelled to defend Mr. Taggart in a matter of this kind or to explain his connection with the casino.

The World is not attacking Mr. Taggart's morals or personal conduct, but his political availability. We have no intention of going so far as the conservative Philadelphia Ledger, which speaks of "the blunder and crime of allowing a man like Tom Taggart to be the head of the Democratic National Committee" and describes his pretense of presiding over Democratic interests as "a howling farce and an insult to the intelligence of Democrats."

It is enough to say that Mr. Taggart's continuance as chairman of the National Committee must work great harm to the Democratic party. Whether by his own fault or not, he has been made an issue, and it is not the kind of issue any political organization can successfully defend. Instead of describing a request for his resignation as "preposterous," he should be the first to perceive the impropriety of not resigning.

CIRCUS PUMA IN RUNAWAY CAUSES PANIC

Driver of Wagon in Parade Falls to the Ground and Horses Run Through Crowds.

BEVERLY, July 7.—Through the breaking of a rein the driver of a wagon containing a wild South American puma lost control of his horses during the parade of Hargrave's railroad circus here to-day, a runaway followed and one woman was knocked down, two women fainted, many children had narrow escapes from being trampled and hundreds of onlookers were thrown into panic.

The injured woman was Mrs. Augustine Andrews of Federal street. As the horses ran a wheel of the puma's cage struck her, throwing her violently to the ground. She was assisted to her home suffering from severe bruises and a nervous shock.

Wagon Driver Falls.

As the parade was moving up Cabot street, the main thoroughfare of Beverly, Driver Jones of the puma cage broke a rein and fell to the ground. His spirited team of horses started to run through the crowds which had pressed close to see the animals.

Right through the crowded street and past the other wagons plunged the horses, the cage containing the snarling puma swaying dangerously and threatening to tip over at any moment!

The people ran screaming from the street and fled in panic. Mrs. Andrews was run down and children narrowly escaped. At the Town Hall the runaways were stopped by the cage catching between a telegraph pole and a stone post. Policemen soon subdued the horses.

The iron bars of the cage were badly twisted, but the puma within was unable to escape though made wild by fright. At the moment the horses started to run, Water Commissioner James Blackmar, who was seated in his buggy, saw the danger and driving right ahead of the runaways he shouted to the people to stand back.

Had it not been for his presence of mind many more would likely have been hurt.

"I believe that I am being persecuted because I am a strong union man, and God grant that I will have strength to remain so."—Statement of John E. Tagney.

2 STRIKERS GO TO JAIL AS WILLING MARTYRS

Lynn Machinists, Declaring Innocence, Imprisoned for Violating Injunction.

Mere Boys, Victims of What Is Charged as Trick of Manufacturers.

For calling a man a scab in violation of an injunction restraining members of Lynn Machinists' Union from interfering with employes of the Essex Machine Company, where there is a strike in progress, John E. Tagney and Henry Ohlson of Lynn are serving a ten days' sentence in Salem jail.

Both Tagney and Ohlson swear they are innocent of the charges against them and declare emphatically that they are being persecuted by the manufacturers in order to arouse public feeling against the striking machinists.

Tagney is twenty-six years old and a widower. He lives at No. 12 Union place, Lynn, with his mother, Mrs. Katherine Tagney, and his two-year-old baby, who is constantly calling for his "papa." Tagney Lynn, with his mother.

Ohlson is a mere boy of nineteen and lives with his parents at No. 30 Ingalls street, Lynn. His mother, Mrs. Charles Ohlson, collapsed when she saw her boy behind the prison bars and for the past week has been ill in bed from the shock.

Two Guilty; Two Discharged.

After a four-days' trial in the equity session of the Suffolk Superior Court at Pemberton square, Judge Schofield passed sentence on the men. Two others charged with the same offence were discharged, one man, Robert Marshall, proving an alibi and John Burke because there was absolutely no evidence against him.

The complainants were John Putnam, twenty, of Swampscott, formerly of High street, Lynn, and Freeman Story, sixty, of Lynn, both employed as strike breakers in the Essex Machine Company shop on Union street.

Young Putnam was the first witness. He testified that on June 12, while walking down Union street toward Central square, Lynn, Ohlson and Tagney passed him. He testified that Ohlson cried out "There goes a scab." He further testified that Tagney said something also but he could not distinguish the words.

He declared on the witness stand that he was positive he saw Robert Marshall in the crowd and that Marshall followed Story and himself when they tried to get away. He testified that he heard Marshall tell one of the crowd that he would hit him when he got a chance.

This testimony was proved false. Marshall was in the court room and proved a complete alibi. He was in Salem during the entire week in which the trouble occurred. At the hour it happened he was in that city, according to the testimony of Policeman Cassidy of Salem.

Putnam, the strike breaker, in winding up his testimony said that on the night of June 14 he was called a scab by someone in a crowd on the other side of the street, but he could not tell by whom.

Heard Nothing Said

Freeman Story, the other strike breaker, who is a sweeper and all-round errand man said that he met Putnam at the junction of Silsbee and Union streets, June 12. He corroborated Putnam's testimony as to the streets they traversed.

Asked if he heard Tagney say anything when Ohlson and Tagney passed Putnam and him on Union street he replied, "No I did not hear Tagney say anything."

Asked if he saw Tagney do anything or throw anything he said, "No, I did not."

When seen at the Salem jail by a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, Mr. Tagney told his story substantially as given on the witness stand. He said: "At the time of this trouble, June 12, I was employed by the Singer Sewing Machine Company as a machinist. I got through work June 12 at 5:30 p. m., went home and had supper.

"I left the house at 7 o'clock for a walk. I was talking with a friend at the corner of Union street and Court when Ohlson came along and asked if I was going down town. I said 'Yes,' and we went together.

"After several minutes' walk I discovered Putnam ahead of us on the same side of the street. I said to my friend Ohlson: 'Now, don't speak to him. Walk right by. Don't notice him.' We did. Not a word was uttered by either of us. We did not even recognize Putnam. We passed him on Union street near School street.

Believes He Is Persecuted.

"I believe that I am being persecuted because I am a strong union man, and God grant that I will have strength to remain so. I firmly believe that I was arrested for the purpose of creating prejudice against the striking machinists of Lynn, who are so honorably fighting for a principle. It seems to me that the evidence upon which I was convicted was not sufficient to separate a man from his family and throw him in jail, branding him as a criminal."

Representative Matthew McCann of Lynn testified briefly at the trial. Business Agent James E. McCann summed up the case of the two union men in a strong argument, saying that Putnam and Story had been going about together looking for a fight with union strikers, evidently for the purpose of having members of the union haled before the court.

"No Disgrace," Says Mother.

Mrs. Katherine Tagney, who is waiting her son's return, said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter: "It is no disgrace for my son to be in jail under these circumstances. I am more proud of him than if he was in the place of the man who accused him. I believe he has been unjustly imprisoned. He has always been a good, faithful boy and an indulgent father. He has good habits and never was in any trouble in his life. I will be glad when he returns home, for his two-year-old baby misses him very much. The little chap does not know what to make of his father's absence. He keeps calling 'papa' every few minutes, and several times has cried himself to sleep with the word on his lips. That little lisp pierces me to the heart."

Mrs. Charles Ohlson is taking her son's trouble to heart. He is nineteen and the eldest child at home. She called at Salem jail Monday, taking with her a large strawberry shortcake which she had made for him. "It nearly broke my heart when they refused to let my boy have the cake I had made for him," she said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "And he was so fond of strawberry shortcake." After leaving the jail Mrs. Ohlson collapsed under the strain. She has been in bed under a physician's care since. She received a bad shock.

"My boy does not drink or use tobacco in any form and has always given me his pay," continued Mrs. Ohlson. "He is a very quiet boy and I am sure he did not commit the offence he is charged with. He says he is innocent and I believe him. He is a good son and I think just as much of him as ever."

OLD DRY GOODS STORE AGAIN CHANGES HANDS

P. B. Magrane of Lynn Heads New Owners of the James A. Houston Co.

For over fifty years one of Greater Boston's leading drygoods stores, the establishment at present owned by James A. Houston Company, but during its conduct owned by several firms, has again changed hands, having been purchased by P. B. Magrane, Lynn's leading department store merchant; P. A. O'Connell, for ten years connected with the house of William Filene's Sons Company, and P. H. Magrane, son of P. B. Magrane.

For over fifty years this same store has been a household term in Boston and vicinity for honest, fair dealing and satisfaction. A store by any other name which treated its patrons the same way would have stood as high in the community. "Houston's store" has had several different firm names in its more than half century of life, but it always was located at the same place, both in reputation and situation.

Only the Owners Change.

Fifty years ago the store was owned by Hogg, Brown & Taylor. If you are an old Bostonian, your mother traded there. This firm gave way to Beals, Higgins & Henderson, then to Houston & Henderson, James A. Houston and finally to the James A. Houston Company. But the store was the same and at the same place—one of Greater Boston's foremost dry goods stores.

Once more the old store changed hands, but it will still be under the name, James A. Houston Company. At the busy corner, Washington street and Temple Place, the same high grade goods will be sold and the same honest dealing accorded all customers.

Many of the departments, notably the silks, in the present Houston's store are considered to be the leaders of their kind here for completeness and efficient conduct; now all departments are to be brought to that standard. While changes will undoubtedly be made, the new firm will maintain rigidly the high and honorable standing of the old store.

Has Made Own Success.

P. B. Magrane, the head of the new firm, was born in Ireland in 1852. He has climbed the ladder to success as a merchant himself. He came to Boston in 1871, and for six months worked on a farm, saving money. With a partner and a team he became a dry goods pedler in 1874, but he did not succeed, owing to his partner's failure to hold his end up. With a pack, Mr. Magrane continued the business, this time so successfully that in April, 1876, he started a store at No. 157 Market street, Lynn.

From that time his rise has been steady and rapid. Success smiled on his work and his store grew until to-day it is the largest department store in Lynn, and one of the largest of its kind in New England. Mr. Magrane has invested in real estate until to-day he heads the Lynn tax list.

P. A. O'Connell was born in Lawrence, Mass., in 1872, and he is regarded as one of the most able retail store managers in the country. He was department manager of a Rochester retail store at the age of nineteen years. For four years he was buyer and department manager for P. B. Magrane at Lynn, coming from that place to the Filene store in Boston.

The new officers of the James A. Houston Company are: P. B. Magrane, president; P. H. Magrane, vice-president, and P. A. O'Connell, treasurer.

KIDNAPPER INDICTED BY GRAND JURY

Joseph O'Brien to Be Tried by Superior Court in Johnnie Mulkern Case.

Joseph O'Brien, the kidnapper from his home in South Boston of eight-year-old Johnnie Mulkern, who was found and his abductor captured as a result of pictures printed in the BOSTON AMERICAN, was indicted by the grand jury in its findings reported to-day.

In its initial report the new grand jury reports forty-nine true bills, including those against Patrick J. Grinham, charged with manslaughter in the death of his wife, and O'Brien, charged with kidnapping the Mulkern boy.

O'Brien's case will come for trial before the Superior Criminal Court. From descriptions and pictures which he saw in the BOSTON AMERICAN John Stone, a cab driver, recognized O'Brien and the Mulkern boy on Hanover street, two days after the latter had been taken away, and caused the arrest.

Patrick Grinham, indicted for manslaughter, is alleged to have killed his wife in a fit of jealous rage. Mrs. Grinham was found unconscious on the floor of her home at No. 5 Weston place, and, according to the police, Grinham, who had been drinking for several weeks and had had several quarrels with his wife, came home and found her and a man named Oscar Rose drinking together.

Grinham and Rose had a fight and Grinham threw Rose out of the house. Grinham went out, and said that when he returned home late in the afternoon he found his wife unconscious. Marks from blows were found on the body by the medical examiner and Grinham was arrested.

LAND FRAUD SHARK GETS 2 YEARS IN JAIL

PORTLAND, Ore., July 7.—S. A. D. Puter, convicted of land frauds, who escaped from Secret Service Agent Burns in Boston and who was recently arrested in Los Angeles, was yesterday sentenced to two years in the county jail and to pay a fine of $7,000.

"SPIELING" RULED OUT AT WONDERLAND BALLROOM

Patrons Are Never Annoyed by This Peculiar East Side Sport—Girls Are Safe There.

"Spielers" are gradually learning that they are not wanted on the polished floor of the ballroom at Wonderland.

Therein is sounded the keynote of the high standard of management which is being maintained for the accommodation of those who know how to behave on a dance floor.

Manager Harry E. Munroe is anxious to have his ballroom patronized by good dancers. But he draws the line at "spieling."

The sportive youths and damsels who like to indulge in the "South End spin" and the "Atlantic avenue slide" can find places in and about Boston where these gaudy manoeuvres are a never-ceasing well-spring of joy. But not in the Wonderland ballroom.

The hundreds of people who are going to Wonderland on the free coupons printed in the Boston Sunday American have noticed this feature of the ballroom and are much gratified thereat.

No Whirling Dervishes There.

Manager Munroe wishes to fill his place with good dancers and well-behaved spectators. But he would rather have it empty than see the floor occupied by couples whose idea of a dance is to pick out one spot in the middle of the floor and forever and eternally spiel like a whirling dervish.

Just a sample:

The other day Manager Munroe was standing by the railing which separates the dancing floor from the broad promenade when a couple entered. "He" wore pronounced clothes and a nonchalant air, both of which marked him as a common or garden sport. "She" was to match. They started out on the floor, caught the time of the music deftly and started to "spiel," spinning about and anon indulging in a twenty-foot slide that would make a sensation in the ballroom of the Somerset.

Manager Munroe walked up to them. There was a brief colloquy. Then the couple left with marked hauteur.

"What's the matter, Harry?" a friend asked Manager Munroe.

"Oh, I told him that they couldn't spiel here. He says 'Well, we'll go where we can.' So I expect they have."

That's one blessed thing about the Wonderland ballroom, one of the many things which contribute to make it one of the most delightful dancing places in the East.

It is noticeable, too, that women, young girls and even little girls feel perfectly safe there without escort. There is no danger, if Manager Munroe can help it, of their having any unpleasant attentions thrust upon them.

In the afternoon hours especially, one can see many little girls come in couples and spend a pleasant hour or two dancing away by themselves. Presumably their mothers know that they are safe there and let them have this innocent amusement under the general chaperonage of Manager Munroe.

"I like to see the little ones come in and have a good time," he says.

Floor Has Right "Spring."

The hard white maple floor is as polished and slippery as a patent leather shoe. It has just the right "spring." When you get out on the shining surface with a pretty girl and Leader A. B. Poole starts his orchestra into a swinging two-step or a dreamy waltz, why, you've just naturally got to dance if you know how.

The orchestra, by the way, is up to the high standard that Mr. Poole has always maintained for it. There are fourteen players and they play as one man.

A word as to price. The ballroom is open from 2 to in the afternoon, and from 8 to 11 in the evening. If a chap takes his "girl" there he pays 15 cents apiece to get in. Then he checks his hat and her jacket. There is a good rule which requires that no garments be left on the chairs. That brings the cost up to 40 cents for the two at the most. And they can dance away for three hours. The management figure that's pretty reasonable.

By the way—don't go there expecting to step lazily through a quadrille or lancers. For it's all round dancing.

USES JIMMY IN RESCUING AGED SISTERS

Sheriff Breaks Down Door to Serve Writ on Plea That They Are Abused.

Two aged sisters sat on a bench in the Supreme Court room, their eyes staring wide at the unusual proceedings in which they were the chief factors, unable to comprehend it all. They were Mrs. Harriet W. Butters, aged eighty-nine years, and Mrs. Caroline W. Estabrook, aged eighty-six years, and the legal fight was for the possession of their persons, waged between Mrs. Helen F. E. Cox of Wollaston, with whom they have been living, and Mrs. Lizzie C. Winslow of Brockton. Both these women are daughters of Mrs. Estabrook.

Mrs. Winslow alleges that the two old ladies are being deprived of their liberty and being ill treated by her sister. The mother and aunt are so feeble that they cannot walk, and had to be carried upstairs into the courtroom by sheriffs.

Deputy Sheriff Blake related to the court the story of how he had to break down the door of Mrs. Cox's house in order to serve the writs upon the two aged inmates, while Mrs. Cox stood upon the piazza above and said things to him which are not repeated in polite society. Dr. Charles Sumner Adams testified to finding bruises on the hands and face of Mrs. Butters, which the daughter declares were made during fits. Mrs. Cox, refused to employ counsel to defend her, but she made such havoc with the rules of jurisprudence that the case was adjourned until Monday to enable her to get a lawyer.

COURT SCORED FOR LENIENCY BY FUNSTON

Soldier Who Broke Prison and Freed Three Others Given Sentence of 3 Months.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—A severe rebuke has been administered by Brigadier-General Funston, commanding the Department of California, to the members of a court-martial for undue leniency shown a prisoner. So offensive was the finding of the board that General Funston dissolved it at once and reported the fact to the War Department.

The court was trying Arthur Armstrong, private in the Twenty-sixth Battery, Field Artillery, on charges of breaking out of prison at Alcatraz Island, California, and of forcing open the cells of three other prisoners, thus permitting them to escape. The prisoner pleaded guilty, but the court held that no criminality was attached to the escape, and imposed a sentence of only three months' confinement for releasing the other prisoners.

General Funston points out that Armstrong had been in prison for fifteen years, and that he was "probably the most desperate, certainly the most despicable, prisoner in confinement on Alcatraz Island."

He adds that "it is evident that the officers who composed the court, or a majority of them, are not qualified to perform the important duty devolved upon them, and the court is hereby dissolved."

The members of the court were: Major Abner Pickering, Captain George N. Bomford, Captain Lawrence A. Curtis, First Lieutenant Harry Graham, First Lieutenant John H. Baker, Second Lieutenant Edward E. McCommon and First Lieutenant Edward W. Terry.

POSSE SEEKS MISSING MAN

Special to the Boston American.

LINCOLN, July 7.—In an endeavor to discover the fate of Michael J. Stanley, the aged paralytic who disappeared shortly after midnight Wednesday from the residence of Edward Bannon, where he boarded, the Lincoln reservoir is to be dredged either this afternoon or to-morrow morning. The reservoir is less than a hundred yards from the Bannon home and it is thought that the man, in a fit of temporary insanity, may have wandered into it.

If no trace of the man is discovered there Beaver Brook Pond, which is surrounded by treacherous quicksands and quagmires, will be searched.

Since early Thursday morning a posse of citizens have been searching for the man, who was greatly beloved by everybody in the town. The Board of Selectmen have offered a reward of $5 for information as to his whereabouts.

SAVE 5 HUNGRY LITTLE ONES

Five neglected children, from two South Boston families, were sent to the Harrison avenue home to-day by Judge Fallon in the South Boston court.

The youngsters, three of them the children of Harry and Mabel Henderson, and the others the children of Patrick and Mary Burke, were found without food or sufficient clothing early to-day by Agent Mann of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

The Henderson children, Mary, aged 6; Gertrude, aged 3, and Henrietta, aged 2, were found in the rear of their home at No. 10 Tuckerman street, South Boston, without shoes or stockings, scantily clothed, and without food. The father is dead and the mother is unable to support them.

In the case of William and Joseph Burke, of No. 115 Third street, eleven and eight years old respectively, the circumstances are almost identical with the Hendersons.

"I AM NOT A CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY"---W. R. HEARST

"Attacks Trusts' Allies in Politics and Says He Made the Fight for Democracy in 1904 When No Other Would Undertake the Task."

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—Congressman William R. Hearst said last night:

"I would like to state very positively that I am not a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1908. Mr. Bryan said the other day that there were others besides himself who had claims on the nomination through services rendered the Democratic party, and mentioned pleasantly Mr. Folk, Mr. Bailey and myself.

"While appreciating Mr. Bryan's compliment, I must decline to be considered a candidate. Let the list stand, if Mr. Bryan pleases, Bryan or Folk or Bailey. For my part, I would substitute Stevenson for Bailey.

"Mr. Bryan's services to the Democracy are too well diagnosed to be rehearsed. He has led the party conspicuously in two Presidential campaigns and one Senatorial campaign. In the national House of Congress he has made the issues himself and expounded them with a brilliancy unequalled, unapproached.

Folk's Services Real.

"Mr. Folk's services to the Democracy are notable and real. In fact, his services have been rendered to all citizens irrespective of party, for his career as an honest and efficient House servant is an example to Republicans and Democrats alike.

"As for Mr. Bailey, well, Bailey's services have been rendered to that corporation end of the democracy that I do not consider democracy, and whose control of the machinery of the Democratic as well as the Republican party has led me to seek my ideals of the democracy of Jefferson and the republicanism of Lincoln in the Independence League.

"Bailey's nomination for first place, even by the machine that nominated Parker, would be impossible; but Bailey's nomination for second place is conceivable. It would have the material effect of insuring Texas to the Democracy and eliciting a substantial campaign contribution from John D. Rockefeller. But its disadvantages are obvious. Folk and Bailey, for instance, would be a water and oil ticket that would not mix—a ticket of good pure water and Standard oil.

Too Much Like Circus.

"Bryan and Bailey would be alliterative and tickling to the ear, but would sound too much like Barnum and Bailey to suit the discriminating taste of the convention.

"Why not Bryan or Folk or Stevenson in 1908 on the Democratic side, and why not Roosevelt and La Follette on the Republican side.

"I repeat, definitely and positively, that I am not a candidate. I made the fight in 1904 for what I considered true democracy; for the democracy I had been taught and the democracy I believed in; for the democracy that represented the will of the majority and the best interests of the majority.

"I made the fight against what I honestly believed to be and still believe to be the forces of corporation corruption. I offered to lead that fight only when no other would undertake the task. I consider that I did my duty in that contest, but I will never undertake another in that way.

Will Lead or Follow.

"A man's motives are much misunderstood and his purpose much misrepresented if he can be charged with having a personal object to attain. I am, moreover, well pleased, as I am well satisfied, to use the powers of my publications to drive out of office the white slaves of the trusts and to promote the fortunes of the honest servants of the people; and I cannot do this as effectually if I am mixed up in purely party politics.

"I am eager to see the line drawn, irrespective of party, between those that believe in special privileges and those that believe in popular rights, between the producing classes and the plundering corporations, and wherever that line is drawn, I will gladly fight, in the lead or in the ranks, as required."

15 WITNESSES TO TELL OF ABUSES AT FOXBORO

LAWYER WHO SAYS TWO MEN HAVE BEEN KILLED THERE WILL PUSH CHARGES.

Declaring that he believes that two men have been killed outright, one man rendered an imbecile for life and many others brutally maltreated, Attorney Henry C. Long of the Tremont Building, who made his first investigation into the alleged abuses at the Foxboro State Hospital at the behest of Joseph A. Hicks, who charges attendants with cruelty, says that he will have fifteen witnesses, when Hicks's case is resumed before Judge Dee in the Walpole District Court next week, to relate the stories of terrible abuses they have told him that they have suffered.

"By the time the case of Hicks is resumed," said Attorney Long to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, "I shall have many witnesses who can relate the terrible abuses which they say they have been subjected to at the Foxboro State Hospital, abuses that worked the death of Francis J. Sullivan of Holyoke and Charles Haggerty of Chelsea; that sent John Boler to the Taunton Asylum a maniac for life, and from which abuse my client, Joseph A. Hicks, was fortunate to escape with his life.

Told of Cruelty.

"I recall the instance of a man named Brennan, who will be a witness and who some years ago was placed in a room with a colored man who was suffering from the smallpox. Brennan, who knew the disease, protested, but in vain until he, too, had contracted it himself, he tells me. Finally friends became interested and got an outside physician to visit the hospital, who at once had it quarantined.

"I am told that repeated blows on the solar plexus killed Haggerty. He was a big, strong fellow, and witnesses say that the attendants were accustomed to jump upon him, sit down violently upon him and apply the toes of their shoes to his abdomen and continually maltreat him until his death resulted.

"Haggerty's offence, for which he was done to death, lay, I am told, in his refusal to take a dose of salts under orders of the doctors. Haggerty died on the morning following his severest beating and when he died the principal officials of the institution, it is alleged, were attending some field sports outside, friendly patients remaining to care for him.

"Sullivan, the other alleged victim, was in no wise a dangerous man, but was rather merely noisy and refractory, being somewhat weak physically. I am told that the attendants were frightened when they learned that Sullivan's father was an ex-Mayor.

"I have not yet called the attention of District Attorney Grover to these matters officially, but that will come in good time, I believe."

Supposed Death Natural.

Mr. Long said that he had received a letter from the counsel of ex-Mayor Sullivan of Holyoke expressing surprise and indignation. Mr. Sullivan had always taken it for granted that his son had died a natural death.

The mother of Charles Haggerty of Chelsea has called upon Attorney Long and has joined her voice and hand to the proposed proceedings against the hospital.

Joseph A. Hicks, the ex-patient and Mr. Long's client, is busy seeing witnesses for the prosecution. Fifteen so far have been found. Mr. Long adds: "In the case of John Boler, it is told me that he was thrown to the floor by an attendant, his head coming in contact with the boards with such great violence that he was rendered unconscious. When he revived his reason had fled for life.

"What I tell the BOSTON AMERICAN is for the reason that I hope good may result in other institutions. Some patients in delirium kept up a yelling, I am told, and to quiet them the attendants were accustomed to give them hard punches in the abdomen, in the solar plexus region. If a stiff punch was not enough, witnesses say that the attendants used their knees with such effect that unconsciousness would result for an hour, when another application of the same kind, if needed, would follow.

Couldn't Fight Back.

"The patients, being irrational, couldn't reason. The ignorant attendants, becoming calloused to violence, argued only with the fist, knee or foot. What was worse, the poor creatures were often put in a strait-jacket or bed harness when the 'quieting' process was indulged in. They couldn't even fight back."

The agitation of the last few days has been added to by the refusal of the Council to confirm the nomination of Trustee John T. Nichols, whom Governor Guild nominated last week for reappointment.

Councillor Bartlett of Lynn, after a conference with the Governor, made the motion to lay over the confirmation of this nomination for one week. The nomination had been made before the charges against the Foxboro Hospital had been made public.

This does not imply that any charges have been preferred against Mr. Nichols, but before the end of another week the Governor and Council will take a trip to Foxboro and look into the matter themselves.

For a long time there have been rumors of abuses at Foxboro, but it has been impossible to arouse officials to any action in the matter until the recent glare of publicity.

23 DAYS have elapsed since the BOSTON AMERICAN filed with the Attorney-General a formal information and petition to bring suit to force the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and the Boston & Albany Railroad to obey the law and to abandon the competing trolley lines which they have illegally acquired.

Why does the Attorney-General delay!

CANAL BONDS TO BE AT PREMIUM

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Who wants the first United States bond to be issued to provide money for the construction of the Panama Canal—No. 1 of the new issue of $30,000,000? Treasury officials expect some fancy bidding on this particular bond, because of historical interest it will have in the future.

Bids on the bonds are coming in rapidly, but at the present they are from small prospective investors. The big banks have not yet come forward. They are waiting to figure their bids down to the last decimal. Every confidence is manifested at the Treasury Department that the issue will command a premium, but there are as many opinions, almost, as there are officials as to what will be the amount of that premium. The best opinion is that they will sell between 103 and 104.

AUTO KILLS BOY AS HE PLAYS NEAR HOME

PROVIDENCE, July 7.—Ralph Benert, the five-year-old son of Philip F. Benert, of Apponaug, was struck and killed by an automobile last evening. The lad was playing in the road near his home and was running across the street.

FEAR YELLOW FEVER ON LINER

NEW YORK, July 7.—When the Ward liner Monterey from Havana came into port to-day the quarantine doctors ordered fifty-seven passengers held on Hoffman Island for observation. The passengers objected vigorously at being detained, but their protests went unheeded.

Suspicious symptoms attracted the attention of the physicians to Alfred da Costa, a fireman aboard the Colon from Colon. Da Costa was transferred to Swinburne Island to enable the physicians to determine whether or not he has yellow fever. The passengers and the rest of the crew were carefully inspected, and the steamship will be disinfected before she is permitted to dock.

GUILTY; TRIED TO POISON DAUGHTER

TRENTON, N. J., July 7.—Charles F. Davenport was found guilty yesterday of attempting to poison his twelve-year-old daughter, Josephine, by sending her doctored chocolate candy through the mail. The jury rendered the verdict in half an hour. The maximum sentence for Davenport is fifteen years in prison and a fine of $1,000.

SAN DOMINGO BATTLE; U. S. MARINES TO LAND

PREPARATIONS BEING MADE TO PROTECT AGREEMENTS WITH THIS COUNTRY.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 7.—Preparations are now being made to land United States marines at San Domingo, where war has broken out between the government and revolutionists. It is realized here that hostilities cannot proceed far without making necessary the landing of marines to see that none of the agreements which have been made between the United States and the San Domingo government are violated.

The information regarding the war came from Commander Southerland at Monte Christi, who, in a cablegram late yesterday afternoon to the Navy Department, said:

"The government leaders have attacked the revolutionists here, but were met with guerilla tactics, and the prospects are that if these are continued the government forces will be worn out. The leaders of the old revolutionary parties are now endeavoring to return to this country."

It is admitted that should the revolutionists gain a victory over the de facto government and themselves become the government, demanding the surrender of the funds now accumulated in New York, just as the present government has already served notice that it would like the money for distribution among its creditors, the situation might become very embarrassing for the United States, which undertook to collect the money for foreign creditors.

NAME ECKELS TO HEAD N. Y. LIFE

NEW YORK, July 7.—Insurance circles hear to-day that former Comptroller of the Currency James H. Eckels of Chicago, who was prominent in the monetary affairs of the country under President Cleveland, has been slated for president of the New York Life to succeed Alexander E. Orr. It was said that President Orr had served notice upon the trustees that he would not stand for re-election.

LONGWORTHS AT THE ELYSEE

PARIS, July 7.—President and Mme. Fallieres received at the Elysee Palace yesterday Congressman Nicholas Longworth and Mrs. Longworth, who were accompanied by Ambassador and Mrs. McCormick. The visit, which was informal, lasted half an hour, during which the party were shown through the salons and gardens. M. and Mme. Fallieres will entertain Mr. and Mrs. Longworth at dinner on Monday night.

Record of Horseman Who Was Nearly

A CENTURY ON TRACK

WHITE RIVER JUNCTION, VT., July 7.—After holding the ribbons over some of the fleetest steppers in the country for more than ninety-two years, or since he was eight years old, "Uncle Charlie" Taylor, the oldest horse driver in the world, has retired from the track and will not enter another race. The centenarian horseman, who is easily the most remarkable physical specimen of old age alive to-day, furnished this information to a reporter as he was busily engaged in erecting a fence around the timber land of his employer, James Ballard of White River Junction.

It is not because of any inability to handle a horse, or even mount a sulky, that Charles Taylor has abandoned the life which he has led since he was a mere boy, but because he feels that there are not sufficient inducements in the business to-day to run chances of being hurt and possibly killed. He has not lost confidence in himself, and he has not lost his nerve, but he has gone beyond the time when money is an object, as he has a good home as long as he lives with James Ballard, the son of his old racing partner, and that is all he wants. Then, again, he has won all the laurels that he desires, and he believes in stepping aside and giving the younger element a chance.

Sensitive About Age.

But the old "war horse" of the turf declares he is not an old man in the strict meaning of the word, and that is the only thing about which he is sensitive. He has a record of his birth, which makes his age 100, December 28, 1905, but he believes he is as young in ideas and activity as many men a generation his junior.

While it may be almost impossible to credit it, the old man can hurdle a fence five feet in height, kick a hat from the head of a six-footer, run at a clip which would distance many men fifty years younger than he is, do a hard day's work, jump across a brook and perform many stunts which would put young men to shame.

If anyone asks him about Dr. Osler and his theory, the genial old "whip" beams with smiles and says that "all fools are not dead yet." In addition, he tells an anecdote about President Roosevelt, who was the guest of honor at a racing meet in Windsor, this State, three years ago.

"The President was in the judges' stand at the Windsor track when I drove an exhibition half-mile with Robert B. in 1:07, and when I finished at the wire President Roosevelt hurried from the stand, saying: 'I want to shake the old man's hand.' One of the judges told him that I would alight and come up there, whereupon the President said: "Oh, no, the old man cannot get off the sulky," but when I heard that as he emerged from the door beneath the stand I jumped to the ground and went to meet him with extended hand, and I never received a more cordial reception in all my life, but I fooled him if he actually thought that a man ninety-seven years old had to be strapped to a sulky."

This is only one of the numerous prided features of the old man's life. During the many years he followed the race track he traveled from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. He has driven upon most every track, and his races were so numerous that he never kept any account of them. He rode horseback for years before the sulkies or even the wagons were introduced in racing, and in his long career he has driven nearly twice as many times as any other man in the business to-day. As he says himself, he was out for the money, and he made it. During that time he handled hundreds of thousands, but through poor management and other reverses he is practically penniless to-day.

Eight-Year-Old Champion.

Taylor was born in Kingston, Ont., December 28, 1805, and he was taught to ride horseback by his father when he was quite young. When the boy was eight years old he was the champion rider of his town, and that year he rode his first race. After one of the most exciting finishes that the town had ever seen, young Taylor was declared the winner. From that day on he had an established reputation as a jockey.

Taylor came to the United States when he was about twenty-five years old, and his success was great from the beginning as a driver.

For the past forty years Taylor has made his home at White River Junction, and he spent a greater part of his time on the old Billings track in this place.

Of all the drivers in the United States to-day, there is not one who is more of a model man and Christian than Taylor. He never drank, smoked, chewed, talked about his neighbors or had the least trouble with anyone in all his life. He never gambled or bought pools from the "bookies." He prides himself on the fact that he never uses profane language.

FRIEND PACES MILE IN 2.06 AT READVILLE

The pacing gelding, The Friend, 2:05¼, worked a mile at Readville yesterday in 2:06, the last half in 1:01.

It was the fastest mile over any Eastern track this season, and has only been beaten by one pacer in the country.

He is in the stable of Emerson L. McCargo, trainer of Wentworth. After the mile he said that before the close of the year he would drive The Friend in two minutes.

Later McCargo worked Carina Dorson, the M. and M. candidate, in 2:11¼.

Millard Drinkwater stepped his Futurity $10,000 colt, Cochato, in 2:18¼, while Lon McDonald asked his Futurity candidate, Codero, to turn the track in 2:21, the final quarter in thirty-three seconds.

Ethel's Pride, the property of John Shepard, trotted a mile in 2:17, last half in 1:06 and final quarter in thirty-two seconds.

TENNIS TEAM RETURNING.

LONDON, July 7.—R. D. Little, Kreigh ollins and Beals C. Wright, the Ameri lawn tennis team left London yester for New York. Mr. Little, in the of an interview, aid the members American team were pleased with thusiastic reception in England.

TERRY ASKS $10,000 TO BOX BRITT

NEW YORK, July 7.—Joe Humphries, manager of Terry McGovern, received a wire yesterday from Jimmy Coffroth, the Frisco fight promoter, asking him if he would match Terry with Jimmy Britt, the fight to take place the latter part of August or the middle of September.

Coffroth offered the boxers 60 per cent of the gross receipts.

Humphries says that he is not anxious to accept a percentage offer, but if Coffroth will guarantee Terry $10,000 for his end, win, lose or draw, he will accept the match. He claims that after Terry's bout with Britt in Madison Square Garden the Britts did not tarry long in the East, and Jimmy refused all offers to meet Terry here, preferring to box him in his native town.

Humphries wants $1,500 for training expenses and the club must post the remaining $8,500 with the San Francisco Examiner.

WOLFF MAKES RECORD.

LONDON, July 7.—Jabez Wolff, the swimmer, swam from Dover to Ramsgate yesterday, covering the eighteen miles in six hours thirty-five minutes, breaking the record for the same course, made by the late Captain Webb in 1875, who covered it in eight hours and a half.

HERRESHOFF TO HAVE TWO TRIAL BOATS

Designer Herreshoff will have two Sonder-Klasse boats in the trials to select representatives of this country in the races with Germany in September. The craft are the Skiddoo and the Chewink VI. Both boats were completed a month ago and were sailed around Cape Cod, the Skiddoo arriving at Marblehead two weeks before the Chewink VI. The latter was weather-bound four days in Vineyard Haven, and when she made the trip around the Cape she met with hard conditions of both sea and wind. Those who were on her say she behaved well.

The Skiddoo has not yet started in a race, and in friendly try-outs with some of the boats in her class she has fallen behind her rivals. Judged by her going, she has certainly not performed as well as many prominent amateur yachtsmen believed she would. She is owned by Herbert M. Sears, one of the best amateur patrons of the sport.

The Chewink VI. is owned by Frank G. Macomber, Jr., who is regarded as an excellent racing man. He has had plenty of experience and is considered one of the best of the Down East skippers. The Chewink VI. since her arrival at Marblehead has been tried out against the Sumatra, the Houdrel and the Hayseed, and she outsailed them. She is held in high esteem by the yachtsmen who have seen her perform, some of whom place her among the three boats which will meet the Germans.

JEFF OVERALL LIKES FANS TO JOLLY HIM

CHICAGO, July 7.—"If the fans of Cincinnati had treated me the way I was received on the occasion of my first appearance here with the Cubs," remarked Jeff Overall, former Red pitcher, "I might have made a success of the game there this season instead of being almost driven back to the old family fruit ranch out in California. In Cincinnati whenever I went into the box there would be whispers of 'Good boy, Jeff,' from a few of the spectators, and yells of 'Take the stiff out; he never could pitch,' from a large bunch of fans. And those were not the only remarks that were made, either. Wasn't it natural that I should feel discouraged under such conditions, and not be able to do myself and the team justice? How different it was when I pitched my first game for the Cubs on the local grounds the other day. I was cheered, jollied and encouraged from the moment I stepped on the rubber. Every ball that I pitched brought forth some sort of favorable comment from the stands, until I felt that I simply had to win the game in the face of so much loyalty and good feeling. If followers of the game only knew how much depended upon their supporting their home players instead of trying to take the management of the team out of the hands of the people who are paid to look after that end of the game, ball players all over the country would have a better time of it and would play better baseball. I know that it worked that way with me."

COLLEGE MEN NO GOOD FOR BIG LEAGUES

CHICAGO, July 7.—"All this talk you hear going the rounds at various times during the season to the effect that this or that college player would greatly strengthen some major league team, or that some amateur from the lots ought to be tried out on the big circuit, makes me laugh," observed Percy Skillen, the Dartmouth College twirler, who is spending the Summer at his home in this city, and who was accounted the best college twirler in America this year.

"I have seen all the crack college men this year, and I also have seen a majority of the National and American League games, and by comparing the players in the two classes I have come to the conclusion that there are but few, if any, college men who could jump into the game and take the places of any of the men who are now working on the big circuits.

"Of course, there are stars among the college players, but they simply are stars in their own class. Take some of the infielders who are accounted wonders among the followers of the college sport, and they would create laughter if they tried to play the game in the big leagues that they are putting up among the college teams.

"So far as I am concerned, I have not yet decided that I will turn professional to try my college skill and success as a twirler against the big leaguers. If I do, the chances are that I will go with the Chicagos and not with an Eastern team, as reported."

SYRACUSE IS TRYING FOR HJERTBERG

NEW YORK, July 7.—It is understood that the athletic authorities of Syracuse University have decided upon Ernie Hjertberg as trainer and general coach for the teams at the Salt City institution. Dr. C. P. Hutchins, who had charge of the football and trackmen, has left to take a position at the University of Wisconsin, and the Syracuse people, who were after Hjertberg when he was trainer at Columbia, want to get him now.

Hjertberg has little to do with college athletics at present. He was in charge at the City College for a short time this year. He is working with the athletes of the Irish American A. C. It is likely that he will close with the people at Syracuse because he likes the place and the men in charge. Hjertberg was inclined to leave Columbia three years ago when Syracuse made its first offer, but his feelings of loyalty to the institution here were too great. It is said that he has had cause to regret his sacrificing his business interests to sentiment.

A great many of the men who have been prominent in the Irish American A. C. have been Syracuse athletes, notably Van Duyn, Lowe, Robertson, Squires, Ralph, Horr, Young and Allen. The latter is the present captain of the track team. It is understood that if Hjertberg goes to Syracuse he will have charge of the training of the football players as well as of the coaching of the track athletes. His functions will be more general than they were at Columbia.

Samuel H. Cook, graduate manager of athletics at Syracuse, is strongly in favor of Hjertberg. "He is an enthusiast over track athletics and a capable trainer. We should be glad to get him, and we think that he is a good man to succeed Doc Hutchins." The first acquaintance Syracuse had with Hjertberg's training methods was in 1902, when Columbia beat out Syracuse in a close dual meet at Syracuse.

DOUGHERTY WITH CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, July 7.—Comiskey says that Pat Dougherty, formerly of the Collins team and later with New York, will join the White Sox during their Boston series, which open to-day at Boston.

HERMIS WILL BE SOLD AT AUCTION

NEW YORK, July 7.—Hermis, the winner of twenty-eight races and $85,080; Stalwart, the winner of $68,028, and Advance Guard, the winner of forty-eight races and $66,254, will be sold at auction to-day at Sheepshead Bay, following the sale of yearlings from several Kentucky studs.

These three great horses are to be sold to dissolve a partnership between Edward R. Thomas and Alex Shields. Mr. Thomas owns a half interest in Advance Guard and Hermis, a three-quarter interest in Stalwart. There is said to be little likelihood of either Mr. Thomas or Mr. Shields attempting to bid in any one of the three horses.

The sale is the most important of the Spring on account of the splendid achievements of the horses offered. Hermis, a son of the imported stallion, Hermence, out of Katy of the West, was one of the fastest horses that ever raced in this country. As a two-year-old in 1901 he won four races, ran second twice and third twice. In 1902 he won ten times, among his victories being the Travers Stakes, Saranac Stakes, First Special, Oceanview Handicap, Jerome Handicap and Mamaroneck Handicap. There were eight winnings to his credit in 1903, among them being the Brighton Cup and the Edgemere Stakes.

Hermis's great year, however, was 1904, when he won the Suburban, beating Major Daingerfield, Irish Lad, The Picket and Africander. There were four other notable victories to his credit in this year. He also started in the World's Fair Handicap, but ran a close second to Colonial Girl. As a six-year-old he won only twice. He has not raced this Spring on account of a bad leg.

Advance Guard is by imported Great Tom—Nellie Van. He has not raced since he was a five-year-old in 1902. Stalwart raced this year, but was taken out of training. He is by imp. Meddler, out of Melba, and has a brilliant record. As a three-year-old he won the Swift, the Century and the Annual Champion. He was unsound last year, and his one start this year—in the Metropolitan Handicap—plainly showed that he was not up to his form.

AL BRIDWELL IS A GOOD EXCHANGE

Boston is not crowing particularly over the fact that Cincinnati secured Jim Delehanty in exchange for Al Bridwell, for the little Portsmouth boy has made good decidedly. Some of the fans make the assertion that they look for Jim to develop into a second Herman Long within a season or so, while others declare that he is about one-half the Boston team.

All these things, however, do not move Manager Hanlon to change his mind from the stand that he secured a strong man when he added Jim Delehanty to the team, and there are others who share his opinion. One of these is Jack Fraser, who played here last season with Delehanty.

"One must see Delehanty day after day in order to appreciate his worth as a player and also to note the improvement in his work," said Fraser. "Jim is getting better all the time, and by the end of this season he will be one of the best batsmen in the National League. I worked with his brother Ed on the Philadelphia team for some years, and the more I see of Jim the more I can see where he has all the artistic characteristics of that great batsman.

"They are being developed slowly but surely, just as they developed in Ed. Why, at one time Harry Wright, then manager of the Phillies, carried Ed's release around in his pocket for a week, it having been ordered by the owners of the team. Then Ed struck his gait and became one of the greatest hitters the game ever has known. And Jim ought to do likewise."

Aged Seventy-eight, to Get $2,500

WALKS 60,000 MILES

LONDON, July 7.—Mark All, the man of seventy-eight who is attempting to walk 60,000 miles in seven years, called at the newspaper offices here after tramping during the day from Canterbury, a distance of fifty-six miles. All, who started his task on August 6, 1900, has been promised $2,500 if he completes it. Up to the present time he has walked 51,750 miles. He was driven to undertake the walk because he was unable to find work at his trade of engineering on account of his age. When he started he weighed eleven stone six pounds, but now he does not draw the scale at ten stone. He gets very tired at the end of his day's journey.

His travels have been by no means devoid of accident. He has been lost in snowdrifts five times, he was struck by lightning at Marseilles and stoned and shot at in Germany. All wears a Union Jack tied around his arm, and to it he attributes his ill treatment in Germany. He has not got on so well since he lost his bulldog, Business, three years ago. The dog walked 21,000 miles with him, and the old man feels his loss keenly. "I lost my best friend when Business died," he said simply. "I carried him a day before I could bring myself to bury him. That was in Marseilles."

All has earned $900 at his trade in various places while on his walk and has also received $225 in gifts. He has worn out thirty-nine pairs of boots. He has toured the British Isles seven times and has also been through France, Portugal, Spain, Holland, Switzerland, Italy and Germany. He hopes to be allowed to walk through Russia. All finds fish or mutton chops the best food to walk on, but when he cannot afford these he finds raisins the best thing to ward off the pangs of hunger. He has two meals a day. His drink is tea or cocoa, and he never takes cold water, which, he says, would be dangerous for him on a long walk.

NEW BOULEVARD IS READY FOR USE

By J. C. KERRISON.

Another boulevard road was opened to the motorists and horsemen this morning. It is that stretch of road connecting Lynn with Revere Beach reservation, from Lynn to Revere street, Revere, and which has been under construction for something like a year. Th opening of this road virtually means one long stretch of fine road from the Mystic Valley Parkway in Medford, through Everett, Chelsea, Revere to Lynn. The only missing portion of a boulevard road, or rather the missing link, is that between Eliot Circle and Revere street, Lynn. In the Winter months that will be open.

The restrictions regarding the use of the so-called Revere Beach reservations by motorists are only in operation during the Summer months, and then between the hours of 10 a. m. and midnight. This road is bound to become popular with the motorists who are bound to the North Shore, as the only bad stretch of road is less than a mile in length, and is by no means as bad as is the road from the Lynn turnpike to Lynn Common, a thoroughfare which at its best is full of ruts and always slimy. This is recognized as about the worse piece of road to be found anywhere in the State. It has long been a wonder to the traveller why the Lynn authorities permit it to exist in that condition.

The opening of the new boulevard this morning goes a long way toward completing the stretch of fine macadam road from Medford right down to Gloucester in one direction, and to Andover and Lawrence in the other. It is another indication of what the State of Massachusetts does for her citizens who travel by the roads.

The new section of the boulevard begins as already stated at Revere street, and runs along the beach road to the Point of Pines. At the Point of Pines is a circle known as Northern Circle, almost the counterpart of Eliot Circle. Those who desire to return by the beach road can easily make a turn here, while other bound to the North will find a northern driveway, across the new bridge spanning the Saugus river and direct across the salt marshes into Lynn.

This road is bound to be a favorite one with those who tour, as it permits of better driving than is to be found through the centre of Revere and across the Lynn turnpike.

Appreciating the great advantages to be gained by opening the carriage road on Mount Washington to motorists the present owners of the same have recently decided to open that road to motorists each Sunday during the season. The promoters, however, distinctly state that no racing or record breaking attempts will be permitted to be indulged in during those days. Heretofore it has been like driving a camel through the eye of a needle to get permission to drive motors up the driveway on any other days than those reserved for the White Mountain hill climb, which have done so much to advance the cause of that particular section. Since, however, the powers that be determined not to risk the chances of serious accident, and likewise cut off a decided source of revenue from the mountain road by changing the base of the climb, the owners have changed about, and now of their own volition make provision for the use of the roadway.

Those who in the past three seasons have been daring enough to drive up the mountains and rich enough to pay the fee for the same will not use the roadway to any considerable degree. They have had their crack at the game, and in their opinion it is not worth the candle. If memory serves one right Anderson and Price the real promoters of the Climb to the Clouds were last year presented with a handsome bill for the use of the roadways by the competing motors. Needless to say the bill was paid by those real sportsmen, the men who have done more than any other two men to make famous and popular the Climb to the Clouds.

The management of the Taunton Fair is considering the advisability of holding automobile events during that week. It is proposed to start the ball arolling with an automobile parade in which prizes will be awarded to the owner of the car coming the greatest distance, to the car making the best apearance without regard to decoration, and to the car whose decoration may be determined to be the prettiest and best. Track events open to amateurs will also be arranged. Mr. Allie E. Barber has the matter in hand.

ST. MATTHEW'S AMATEURSPORT

The events are 100-yard dash, 440-yard run, 880-yard run, one-mile run, running broad jump, running high jump, putting sixteen-pound shot and open team race.

Three prizes are offered. The entrance fee is twenty-five cents for the first event and ten cents for each additional entry.

Entries close Wednesday, August 1, 1906, with H. C. McGrath, Charlesbank gymnasium.

MISS SUTTON TO TRY AGAIN.

LONDON, July 7.—Miss May Sutton of California, who was defeated by Miss Douglass in the challenge round of the British women's tennis championship, will make an attempt next Summer to regain her laurels and again stand as the premier woman tennis player of the world. At the close of her match she declared that she intended, if funds would allow, to come over to England again to play through the championship. She expects to go to Newport next week for the Welsh championship, returning to America in ten days.

FASTEST TROTTERS IN THE WORLD MEET TO-DAY

finely, not showing a sign of the old trouble. Just before shipping from Poughkeepsie I drove him a mile in 1:09¾, half in 1:03¼. He cooled out after the trials satisfactorily, but right after my arrival here I noticed he seemed to favor the hind ankle I supposed was the strong one.

"At first I thought it my imagination, as it could not be true. I am inclined to believe Readville track a hoodoo for Tiverton. The only two times he was ever back of money in a race was right here, and it has been here he went lame last year and again now."

Every train brought hundreds of men and women to the track. Their appetite for a thrilling horse race had been whetted by the disappointment of July 4, when a great three-cornered race had to be put over until to-day on account of the rain.

Since the Fourth Secretary Jewett has had scores of men busy on the course putting it in as fine condition as one could wish for and not a few experienced horsemen were willing to wager that exceptional time [illegible] be reeled off in the heats.

New Englanders do love a first-class trotting race, and no greater attraction could have been arranged for them than the one they came to see. The great rivalry of the two contestants, the fact that their best records is within a fraction of a second of each other only served to make the interest in the race more keen.

It was hardly expected that the horses could beat their best mark at this season of the year, but stranger things have happened and in a struggle like this there was sure to be fast clocking.

To add zest to the conflict the money hanging in the balance for the winner amounts to a fortune. The first horse will get $7,500 and fifty per cent. of a pro ratio of the gate receipts.

It can be safely said that the winner will realize fully $12,000 for trotting the race. The event is best two in three heats, on the New York plan of a horse not getting a heat in two going to the barn, and the heat winners fighting out alone the third and deciding heat.

From the training quarters of each comes the word that the equine stars are in the pink of condition. Each of the trainers and drivers openly state their confidence in the ability of their horses to head the summary.

So far as the rail birds can find out, each has been trials within a fraction of a second of the others, both in miles, halves and even quarters.

It is like tossing a penny to figure the winner. All three have a great chance to cop the race. The slightest error by either means certain defeat. This means that a lot must be left to the fortunes of war or racing luck.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Boston, July 7.—When the White Sox got on the field for the first game of the second home series with the Pilgrims they expected to find only a few remnants of a team after the Highlanders had dropped them three straight, but instead they were greatly deceived as the spirit was still there and the staunch regulars backed up by the promising young blood infused into the team, were ready to give the visitors all the trouble they wanted.

The half-holiday turnout was immense considering the team's lowly position, but the Windy City aggregation was always a good card in the Hub, and Captain Jones one of the best favorites.

The drubbings the Hubites got at the hands of the Highlanders they counted on making up on the Sox and got on [illegible] when the curtain went up.

Collins's forces were far from being in suitable shape to face a team like the Sox which has been making hay on the trip, but the home players were not to be frightened by any proposition.

The local twirlers were in hospital shape, and Collins had to send a hurry call for Harris, who was put in action only a couple of days ago, and let the youngster try his luck against the Sox. It was a good test for the pill pitcher on his ability to do over time work in the box.

Captain Jones usually likes to start Nick Altrock in the Hub series as he gets going right, and he had his eye on the great southpaw, but also knew it was Owen's turn to do the flinging.

BRUSH WILL HOLD ON TO M'GRAW

NEW YORK, July 7.—"I wouldn't give McGraw for all the managers that ever lived."

In these words President John T. Brush of the Giants, officially denied the report from St. Louis, to the effect that he had been negotiating with Manager McAleer, of the Browns to succeed the little scrapper as leader of the Giants.

"I would not know McAleer if I met him on the street, and I will give anybody $10,000 for a scratch of a pen or even a telegram from me or any agent of mine to McAleer on this subject. You cannot make my denial too strong."

The story which called forth Mr. Brush's statement was sent from Cleveland Thursday. An "intimate friend" of the St. Louis manager was supposed to have stated that McAleer had received such a fat offer from the management of the Giants that he could not afford to refuse, and would immediately begin negotiations to secure his release from the St. Louis club in order to accept President Brush's offer.

SOLDERS IN FIELD SPORT AT FT. BANKS

At the Fort Banks field day the athletic events were the feature attractions. Captain James F. Howell, A. C., had charge of the games.

The principal event was the 100-yard dash, won by Sergeant Manion, Seventy-sixth Co., the star athlete of the post, in 10 4-5 seconds. The next of importance was the relay race, which was awarded to the Seventy-sixth Company, time, 2m. 16 1-5s. Private Farrenden, Seventy-sixth Company, and Private Girade, Eighty-ninth Company, leading. The former easily distanced his opponent. Private Trinity, though a hot contestant at the finish, was no match for Sergeant Manion of the Seventy-sixth Company.

The most amusing feature of the day was the "Shoe Race," and Private Gage, Seventh-sixth Company, found his No. 10's first and was thereby declared the winner; time, 1m. 4s.

The "tug of war" went to the Eighty-ninth Company by virtue of superior ground and weight.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, July 7.—Gotham fans wended their way to the historic diamond field in a state of uncertainty, as the Gothamites have learned to have a lot of respect for the Tenneyites since they have turned the Giants down in some of the greatest battles ever seen between two teams.

It was the third game, and each team was in possession of one, and it was a safe bet that both would make a desperate effort to land the third and last of the series to-day.

Tenney's men showed no effects of the hot pace which McGraw's men have carried them along, and were as sprightly as two-year-olds in a stake event.

The Giants had their reputation to sustain, and visions of another setback by the tailenders did not appeal to them.

It was scratch gravel from the word for the McGrawites to stem the aspirations of the Hub band, and they had to hustle to keep the upper hand.

Tenney had Lindaman on the firing line with "Little Cy" Young ready to step in.

MORAN MEETS HUGH M'LEAN AT REVERE

It is a dual match at the Revere track to-night when Jimmy Moran and Hugh MacLean meet in a twenty-five-mile race behind the motors.

It will be a fight all the way, as there is not a pair of professionals existing where the rivalry is stronger for supremacy on the track.

As Walthour has just gone abroad the two rivals will settle between them who will have the privilege of meeting him on his return, and it is needless to say that both want the chance.

Both riders have always claimed the championship and never miss a chance to get together to decide the matter. Moran was beaten by MacLean last year, but he is going better now, and after his European trip has found a lot of speed and is confident that he can now take his townsman's measure.

The friends of the men are about evenly divided in Chelsea and Revere, and there will be considerable betting on each one.

It will be the first time Moran has ridden since his return from abroad, and he wants to make a good impression at the start of the season, so he will be a card later on. MacLean is equally eager to get the big end of the purse, and will carry the mikeman at a terrific clip before acknowledging defeat.

There will be several match races besides the amateur events.

MARIE L. GETS PURITAN CUP

MARBLEHEAD, July 7.—The new 22-footer, Marie L., won the Puritan cup for making the best time over the 22¾ mile course at the annual regatta of the Eastern Y. C. here yesterday.

In the schooner race the Corona crossed the finish line 21 minutes ahead of the Dervish, but the race was awarded to the latter on time allowance.

In Class K schooner the Doris had a walkover, her only competitor being the old cup defender, Mischief. The old champion has evidently seen her best days, for she was so far behind the rest of the fleet at the finish.

In Class M the Marie L. was an easy winner, finishing some 31 minutes ahead of the Heron.

Whip and Spur Jots at Salem Race Track

The crowd was present in full force.

Too bad that the racing was not more interesting. The winners had a cinch.

Jockey Garner was "it" with both feet, as it were, taking three of the races with his mounts.

And the further he goes the more he gets in the lead. It looks now as though he had the other boys smothered in the contest for leading jockey for the meeting.

As it now stands Garner has won eleven first to six for his nearest competitor, Crimmins. The other boys rate: Notter, five; Keyes, four; McIntire, four; Noone, three, and Hildebrand, Fadlock and Daly two winning races each.

Had there been betting the favorites were the winners of the first four races, while the final event was nailed by a strong second choice. This is taking it from the way the wise followers of racing picked the horses.

Close admirers of the sport are well pleased with the increased attention the residents of New England are giving the runners. As the meeting progresses it will not take much to bring them into being enthusiasts.

It was surprising how many favored Thespian in the fourth race. The last time out he shut up like a jackknife when collared at the head of the homestretch. However, it was thought he was made too much use of in the early stages of the race by the boy on his back, thus making the race a false one to judge on.

There has been plenty of selling races during the meeting, but up to date nobody has thought of bidding up the winner or claiming one of the others at the entered price. Likely the reason is that all believe there has been trouble enough made by some persons without stirring up more strife by bidding in a horse or two. Horsemen always hang together pretty well.

"Boston Jack" McDonald is not bothered a particle about the item in the New York Sun relating that he got the men in the scheme back of the Salem track by talking through his hat. When shown the story he replied that had he ever worked on the Sun he never would have been successful in getting the parties interested in any proposition, let alone building a race track.

By the way, "Boston Jack" did not hail from the city he was nicknamed after, but first saw the light of day in Andover, Mass. Besides being a thorough horseman he has been identified with the newspaper game in all parts of the globe. Years ago he and Wallace had many a setto about the thoroughbred blood in the trotters in the New York papers.

Beginning Monday two of the special trains from Boston to the track will be taken off. Those running will leave the North station at 12:30 and 1:25 p. m.

Another change, too, is taking the short distance races off the chute and having them decided on the circular track. Many of the spectators prefer seeing the races on the regular course, hence the shift.

Everything is working fine for the gentlemen races booked for next Saturday. Some of the most prominent society riders have announced their intention of having entries in the race. A party of the "400" are coming in, special cars from Manchester-by-the-Sea to see the fun. Let the good work go on.

At the close of the meeting Mike Daly will ship three of his horses to Saratoga, sending the balance of his string to his farm near Hartford, Ct., to rest before facing the barrier at some of the fall meetings.

Abe Garson and James McLaughlin, Jr., shipped to-day twenty-five horses from the Buffalo track to Salem. Among the number were several that have winning brackets in the Kenilworth meeting, which closes this afternoon. Garson likes the surroundings so well he has engaged a cottage for his family near Salem.

James Griffin had an idea he would vamoose to Fort Erie, where the meeting opens Tuesday, but after sleeping on the proposition over night changed his mind and will remain at Rockingham Park till after July 21.

WALCOTT TO MEET TOUGH WESTERNER

There will be a warm time at the Lincoln Club in Chelsea next Tuesday night, and all the ring fans will be at Pythian Rink, judging from the interest being taken in the world's championship contest in the welterweight class between Joe Walcott, the present holder of the title, and Jack Dougherty of Milwaukee, who is without doubt one of most formidable lads that ever performed in this class.

Dougherty will arrive in this city to-day, and will go direct to Mike Deveny's Highland Lake Farm, where he will finish up his training. He has proven so successful in his ring work that he feels that the championship honors are already in his grasp, and he is confident as he can possibly be that on Tuesday night he will wear the crown that Walcott has enjoyed so long.

When Dougherty met Mellody in Milwaukee the lads fought as desperate as Mellody and Lewis did at Chelsea July Fourth, the contest going the full distance and a slugging bee every second. So close was the match that George Siler, the premier referee of the world, failed to pick a winner and declared the match a draw.

This is mighty good evidence that Dougherty is one of the grandest performers ever seen in the East.

Forfeits for both men have been posted and also are conditions arranged so that the main bout will start promptly at 9 o'clock. If successful Dougherty says he will force Honey Mellody to box him, and will be ready to defend his title against all comers, no matter what color they may be.

"There's only one way to win championships from colored men," writes Dougherty, "and that is to knock them out." I am confident that I will beat Walcott, and if I do I will force Gans to meet me and I'll put him out of the business, too."

The club has arranged a swell semi-final for Tuesday night. The contestants will be John J. Collins of Roxbury, who won the amateur championship at Mechanics Building a few weeks ago, and Willie Riley of South Boston, a lady who is regarded as a coming champion in the lightweight class.

In the opening bout of six rounds Jimmy Hanlon of the West End will face Frank Adams of Newton.

ST. AUGUSTINE'S BIG FIELD DAY

The big event in track and field sports of the year will be that of the St. Augustine's Parish, South Boston, which will be held on Saturday, July 28, at Harbor View, formerly known as Locust street grounds, Dorchester. All the leading amateur athletes of the country will be contestants for the beautiful prizes offered. These games are always the best of the year, the world's champions competing regularly, and an athlete eager to improve will have ample chance to learn form and best methods to adopt in training from the world's greatest exponents in each athletic event.

There will be fourteen events on the programme, six being handicapped and eight scratch. The handicap events will be limited as follows: One hundred-yard dash, 5 yards; 440-yard run, 20 yards; one mile run, 70 yards; running high jump, 4 inches; running hop-step and jump, or two hops and jump, 3 feet; putting 16-pound shot, 4 feet. The scratch events are 120-yard high hurdles, 120-yard low hurdles, 880-yard run, two-mile run, 100-yard dash, novice; 440-yard run, novice; throwing discus and throwing 56-pound weight.

There will be three prizes given in each event. The entrance fee will be twenty-five cents an event and the games are sanctioned by the N. E. A. A. U., and no entry will be accepted from individuals or clubs without entry fee. Athletes will be given their tickets at entrance to grounds. Athletes not registered can do so by applying to J. Frank Facey, 36 Prospect street, Cambridgeport, Mass., and paying twenty-five cents.

The entries will close on Monday, July 23, with John Moakley, 577 East Eighth street, South Boston, Mass.

HORSE WINS 100 RACES

W. B. Gates, old campaigner in the stable of R. R. Rice, the Arkansas horseman, has won his 100th race, and now he will get his long promised retirement from racing. A long time ago, when W. B. Gates was approaching his century victory, Rice announced that as soon as the horse made it an even hundred he would be retired to a life of ease on pastures green, and after Gates's recent victory Rice said he would make the promise good. W. B. Gates is a nine-year-old gelding, by Prince Royal—Penelope, and has raced on almost every track of importance in the country.

DONLIN ROOTS FROM PORCH

NEW YORK, July 7.—Baseball fans at the Polo Grounds, if they didn't know it, would need only to glance up at the clubhouse portico to tell how go the fortunes of the game. Mike Donlin, erstwhile champion batter, but at present a cripple, is the barometer.

The injury to his leg which put the outfielder out of the game at Cincinnati several weeks ago does not keep him away from the Polo Grounds. So long as the Giants are showing the way Donlin can be seen leaning back comfortably taking lazy drafts at a cigarette. But let the opposing team pull alongside or attempt to poke the running the cigarette is tossed away, possibly the straw hat suffers a similar fate. Leaning over the veranda Donlin bawls out words of encouragement to his pals. He stamps his good foot, claps his hands and yells with all the glee of a child.

While Donlin's injured leg is getting along as well as can be expected, the doctors say he has been fortunate indeed not to lose it. There is little likelihood of his being in the game before the middle of August. His absence is felt keenly by the team.

EVANS-HYLAN MEET FOR CUP

In the semi-finals at the interscholastic golf tournament at the Oakley Country Club yesterday Evans (DeMerritte) and Hylan (Lowell Textile) both won, and they will be pitted against each other in the thirty-six hole final round for the championship cup to-day.

The consolation event and the contest for the president's cup, for those who failed to qualify in the other events, will continue through to-day.

CITY GAMES TO-DAY.

The city athletic games postponed from the morning of July 4 will take place this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on Boston Common.

NEW STYLE HELPS YOU TO MAKE OVER DRESSES

Contrasting "Hem" Is Welcomed by the Thrifty

ONE of the freaks of fashion this season is the contrasting "hem" used on all sorts of gowns, from silk to chiffon. This "hem," or binding, is usually about two inches in width, is more often of silk than any other material, and may be either of matching or contrasting color.

This scheme has been very much used by the notable French couturieres, and is a favorite way of introducing the touch of black that they are employing with figured materials of a "Pompadour" type.

Smart domestic designers have adopted the same wrinkle in making up linen costumes, and it offers great possibilities for making over gowns or freshening those that are worn at the foot.

For lengthening frocks for growing girls this or wider bands, contrasting in material but matching in color, is an excellent expedient.

If the bands are wide it is well to have the upper edge done in points, battlements or scallops, and they can be stitched by machine, blind stitched or finished with a row of narrow soutache braid.

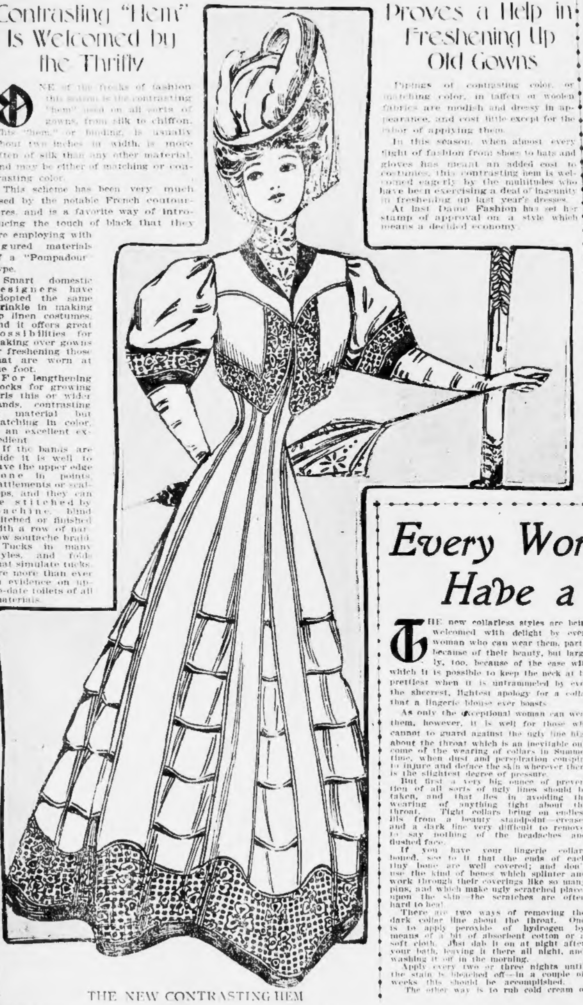
Tucks in many styles, and folds that simulate tucks, are more than ever in evidence on up-to-date toilets of all materials.

Proves a Help in Freshening Up Old Gowns

Pipings of contrasting color, or matching color, in taffeta or woolen fabrics are modish and dressy in appearance, and cost little except for the labor of applying them.

In this season, when almost every flight of fashion from shoes to hats and gloves has meant an added cost to costumes, this contrasting hem is welcomed eagerly by the multitudes who have been exercising a deal of ingenuity in freshening up last year's dresses.

At last Dame Fashion has set her stamp of approval on a style which means a decided economy.



THE NEW CONTRASTING HEM

There's One Debt No Living Being Can Ever Repay

By Beatrice Fairfax

RATHER than pay two dollars a week toward the support of his aged mother, a well-to-do man recently went to the penitentiary.

There is nothing in the world more contemptible than ingratitude on the part of a child toward the mother that bore him.

A whole lifetime of devotion will not repay the tender love and care she gave him in his infancy and his youth.

If young people only knew the bad impression they make when they show disrespect to their parents I do not believe they would be guilty of it.

Not only does it betray lack of feeling, but also lack of breeding.

A good son makes a good husband and a good daughter a good wife, so I advise you all, young men and women, to find out what kind of sons and daughters your sweethearts are before you choose them for life partners.

I would hate to be the wife of that man who went to the penitentiary rather than give his poor old mother two dollars a week.

The woman who married him would be condemning herself to lifelong misery.

Your parents have brought you up, educated you, given you your start in life.

Your mother's eyes have grown dim and her shoulders weary slaving and caring for you.

Your father has grown old and worn in the struggle to make a home for you.

Do you think you can ever do too much to make them happy and comfortable in their old age?

Don't make them feel that they are old and useless and that nobody wants them around.

Honor and respect them, and see that your friends and acquaintances who come to the house do likewise.

In doing all this you are only repaying the debt you owe your parents. You deserve no special credit for it, for you are simply doing your duty.

When I see a young girl answering her mother in an impatient, saucy manner I think to myself: Young woman, you are not the kind of girl I would want any man I liked to marry, for you never could make any man happy.

When you see a girl or a man caring tenderly for an old person, parent or friend, that is the girl or man to cultivate.

The girl will be sweet and gentle and womanly.

The man will be strong and tender and manly.

But when you see a man treating his mother or father with disrespect, keep away from him, he is not the kind of man who will make you happy.

And when you see a girl letting her mother do all the heavy work and speaking impertinently to her, keep away from her also, for she is not the girl any man wants for his wife.

It is your privilege and duty to see that your parents are comfortable and happy in their old age, and nothing can excuse lack of attention on your part.

Advice to Anxious Sweethearts

By Beatrice Fairfax

A FAIR ARRANGEMENT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have paid attention to a young woman for the past year.

Now, there are reasons why I do not wish to marry, and, wishing to be perfectly upright, I told my friend that my attentions were not serious, and that I did not wish to be considered a barrier to her accepting invitations from other young men, as she is a popular girl and has many friends.

She became very indignant and scored me roundly for supposing that she had considered my attentions in any way serious, and yet she continues to refuse the slightest attention from anyone but myself.

Under these circumstances, do you consider that I am acting unmanly in using up two of her evenings each week? She has also given me to understand that should I pay attention to any other girl our friendship must cease.

L. F. B.

YOU have been perfectly honest regarding your attentions, and if the girl thoroughly understands the situation and still wishes to have you call you are relieved of all responsibility. She is foolish to cling to the attentions of a man who frankly tells her his intentions are not serious.

MAKE NO ENGAGEMENTS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A young gentleman calls at my house whom I dislike very much. He is a perfect gentleman, and I know he loves me, because his actions show it. I am very cold toward him and do not encourage him in making engagements. He has escorted me to several places of amusement, where we have always met a gentleman friend of his, whom I care a great deal about, although it is rumored that he is almost engaged, but I can't understand why he never takes her out anywhere. He is very friendly toward me, and he also knows how I dislike this other friend of mine. This friend whom I dislike is continually making engagements. What I want to know is how I can tell him I don't wish him to do so, as I wouldn't hurt his feelings for anything.

CONSTANT READER.

IF you don't like him why do you go with him? It would be much kinder to him in the long run if you did not go with him at all. It is easy enough to have some excuse every time he asks you. You had better not let yourself grow too interested in the other man, as he may be engaged to the girl you speak of.

Every Woman Can Have a Good Neck

THE new collarless styles are being welcomed with delight by every woman who can wear them, partly because of their beauty, but largely, too, because of the ease with which it is possible to keep the neck at its prettiest when it is untrammeled by even the sheerest, lightest apology for a collar that a lingerie blouse ever boasts.

As only the exceptional woman can wear them, however, it is well for those who cannot to guard against the ugly line high about the throat which is an inevitable outcome of the wearing of collars in Summer time, when dust and perspiration conspire to injure and deface the skin wherever there is the slightest degree of pressure.

But first a very big ounce of prevention of all sorts of ugly lines should be taken, and that lies in avoiding the wearing of anything tight about the throat. Tight collars bring on endless ills from a beauty standpoint—creases and a dark line very difficult to remove, to say nothing of the headaches and flushed face.

If you have your lingerie collars boned, see to it that the ends of each tiny bone are well covered; and don't use the kind of bones which splinter and work through their coverings like so many pins, and which make ugly scratched places upon the skin—the scratches are often hard to heal.

There are two ways of removing the dark collar line about the throat. One is to apply peroxide of hydrogen by means of a bit of absorbent cotton or a soft cloth. Just dab it on at night after your bath, leaving it there all night, and washing it off in the morning.

Apply every two or three nights until the stain is bleached off—in a couple of weeks this should be accomplished.

The other way is to rub cold cream or vaseline well into the throat where it is marked, letting it stay on all night, then wiping off whatever excess of grease there is in the morning and bathing with soap and as hot water as you can stand. Finish by sponging with cold water, making a cup of your two hands and dashing the cold water on freely if you are susceptible to colds.

Do this every night for two or three weeks, and the dark line will gradually disappear.

Massaging the neck is of great benefit, whether it be thin or fat, for the muscles become developed by the gentle exercise of massaging and keep a fat neck from getting flabby.

For a thin neck the massaging should be accompanied by the use of a good cream, taking care not to use either lanolin or cocoa butter too freely, as both of them have a tendency to yellow the skin.

One more point: when bathing take a small flesh brush (a soft nail brush will do) and scrub vigorously well into the edge of the hair. Dust and perspiration often make as ugly a line there as the collar does on the neck itself.

BROADENS THE CHEST

EXERCISE with dumbbells that will broaden the chest and develop the neck consists in thrusting the weight out at full length first above the head, then in front, then straight to the side, and lastly as far to the back as one can reach. The arm should be held without bending at the elbow, and a weight is used in each hand. Bells weighing a pound each will be heavy enough. The exercises should be done for five times each at the beginning, effort being put into the thrust.

Dainty and Pretty Home-Made Bonnet

AMERICAN mothers who have taken kindly to those lovely little French bonnets will be delighted with the latest fashion, which really seems the most bewitching of all. This may be, in part, due to the fact that it is eminently practical, a point very reasonably demanded for children's clothes in America.

Such a bonnet is easily made at home—by no means its least attractive feature. It requires one yard of cambric allover embroidery, in some small, simple design; a half yard of six-inch deep embroidery that will go with the other, a yard of thin lawn for lining, a piece of small cotton cord and five yards of soft, three-inch satin ribbon.

Cut your brim and sides of crown on the lengthwise of your material. The centre of the crown is also cut on the straight. The linings should follow the same rule.

Begin your sewing with the poke brim; baste lining and outside together, turn in your outer edges toward each other and stitch on the extreme edge; rip out your basting, slip a cord between outside and lining, stitch it in place and continue the cords at intervals of a half inch to the inside.

Do the large part of your crown in exactly the same manner, beginning your first cord in a tiny hem, so that it may be drawn in at the corners to fit the small centre crown.

Be careful not to let your stitches run into this first cord, because it must act as a sort of drawstring. For cording your centre of crown, begin with the centre cord, going outward in the lines indicated.

When all are finished, tack the pieces together by hand. Plait your curtain in place; finally, to give a regular French touch, arrange your ribbon in a soft rosette over each ear.

TO WATERPROOF CLOTH

TAKE of powdered alum and sugar of lead each half an ounce and stir them into a gallon of rain-water, and when the mixture is clear pour off the upper liquid. Immerse the cloth for twenty-four hours, then dry and press it. The cloth will be uninjured in color and texture, and will stand any amount of rain to which you are likely to be exposed.

HOW TO CARRY BABY

AT birth the spine is quite straight, but will bend in any direction when pressure is applied. The back must be well supported, and even an older child should not be allowed to sit up too long, or the spinal column, being too weak to support the weight of the head and arms, will bend in the wrong direction. It is much better for baby to lie and kick in his cot than for him to be nursed in some one's arms.

"SHADOWS OF NEW YORK"

Copyright, 1906, by American Journal Examiner.

"MISS WYNNE, you have confessed that you would like to see more of the world than so far you have had an opportunity of doing. Well, your duties at the school would for the greater part of the year keep you tied to a little town as much out of the world as that in which you have been living. In a word, Miss Wynne, I have come to offer you the means of spending a pleasant, idle year, travelling about, seeing the world—and at the same time of obliging me very much, more, indeed, than I can express."

"Please explain yourself, Mr. Herries," she cried quickly.

"For a certain reason connected, you must understand, with matters quite apart from yourself, I do not wish you to take this post. I want you to let me write you out a cheque for $2,500 and consider the engagement cancelled."

The little schoolmistress starred at him open-eyed.

"You mean you offer me five years' salary?" she cried incredulously.

"As compensation for your trouble and disappointment," said Harries.

"But—but I can't understand it at all," Miss Wynne cried. "Why you do not wish me to come I do not of course know; but as my employer you need only give me six months' salary in lieu of notice and the matter is ended. Why do you offer me this large sum?"

"I wish to be quite fair to you," he said; "there is a stipulation attached. In view of the obligation it would place me under, that sum is not excessive. Frankly, Miss Wynne, though I do not wish you to come to Yonkers, I want—to buy your name, to buy your identity, as it were. In other words, the lady who will take the place you were to have filled, I wish to be known as Miss Wynne, to represent herself as the daughter of the former steward who went to England——"

For a moment Miss Wynne did not answer; then she said slowly:

"I need not say, of course, that this sounds a very odd thing; it is a deception to which I become a party, if I consent. I should like to know a little more, Mr. Herries, before I can give you my answer."

An Act of Charity

"You have scruples about lending yourself to this deception," Herries said, "and I admire you for them. In this matter I am not at liberty to take you into my confidence—only you may be sure of one thing: It is a perfectly innocent deception, prompted by no dishonorable motives. If you were to know the whole circumstances of the case, you would understand that you were being asked to lend your help to what is in the highest sense of the word an act of charity.

"I can assure you of this: If you will consent, you will be helping a woman who through no fault of her own has been the victim of a cruel wrong. I give you my word of honor on that point."

While he spoke Miss Wynne had been regarding him steadily with her clear, grave eyes.

"And yours is the face of an honorable man—a true Herries face," she said, in her frank, direct way. "I admit that it was on the ground of scruples that I have been hesitating.

"In itself your offer is most tempting to a woman who has lived a monotonous existence, pent up in a little corner out of the world from which there seemed no escape. Your offer is very tempting. And if I consider——"

"The only stipulation would be that if you wished to revisit your native town you did so under another name. You say you have no friends in America; the deception would be [illegible] the risk of discovery practically nil, if your consent were given. Come, Miss Wynne, will you agree?"

"It sounds so very mysterious," she added, as if she still had some lingering scruple.

"And must remain so, since another's secret is involved," he said. "I won't put it as a mere monetary matter, but as one of humanity. Miss Wynne, I want to buy your name, your identity; will you sell? Yes or no?"

He held out his hand.

She hesitated for a moment, looking at him; then she took his hand.

"Since I believe the deception is an innocent one," she said, "yes."

All Prepared

Herries parted cordially from Miss Wynne, leaving that usually unemotional little schoolmistress aglow with excitement at the prospect of a long respite from the monotonous drudgery of teaching, with a check in her pocket that to her represented almost boundless wealth. He had two telegrams to send off before he took the train back to Yonkers.

"Expect me about 3. Send trap to meet train. Wynne."

This telegram was dispatched to the old woman in the town whose duty it was to look after and clean the pretty little cottage where the schoolmistress lived. Before sailing Miss Wynne had been instructed to telegraph to this old lady on landing, saying when she was to be expected. The other telegram was to Olga at Jamaica:

"Everything arranged. You are expected by the 1:20 train from Jamaica."

Herries had made all preparations for carrying out the scheme. He had visited a theatrical costumer in Fourth avenue to buy a trunk with the newness off and your choice of hotel and steamship labels pasted over it. It is surprising how cheaply one can purchase evidence of wide travel.

Herries was anxious there should be no flaw in his scheme; he had jumped at the opportunity Miss Wynne's arrival afforded of providing this hunted girl with a shelter. In the role of mistress of this little school she might sink her identity and live unsuspected, unmolested, until the police ceased to search for her.

There was more than a reasonable hope that the scheme would be successful. No one had seen Miss Wynne, or even her photograph; why should not Olga take her place, pass herself off as the woman to whom Lionel Herries had offered the place? Olga's appearance would have to be altered of course, but to disguise it had not proved an insuperable difficulty; he had instructed the old family servant at Jamaica, in whose house the girl was sheltering, to buy the necessary clothes that Olga would need before she started for Yonkers.

Another Surprise

Since the real Miss Wynne had consented to efface herself there seemed no reason why the plan should not work admirably. Herries had not one single foreboding that day.

He jumped into a hansom to drive to the station. As the cab passed into Broadway the sudden glimpse of a placard made John Herries signal to the cabman to stop.

"Paper, sir? Yessir!" as the boy rushed up in response to Herries's summons with an armful of newspapers just issued. "Robbery of the famous Herries Diamond."

It would have surprised the cabman considerably to know that he was driving the owner of the diamond, worth goodness knows how many thousands, that had been stolen a couple of hours ago!

"THE JUNGLE."

Blacklisted and His Child Starving

CHAPTER XX.

BUT a big man cannot stay drunk long on $3. That was Sunday morning, and Monday night Jurgis came home, sober and sick, realizing that he had spent every cent the family owned and had not bought a single instant's forgetfulness with it.

Ona was not yet buried; but the police had been notified, and on the morrow they would put the body in a pine coffin and take it to the potter's field.

Elzbieta was out begging now, a few pennies from each of the neighbors, to get enough to pay for a mass for her; and the children were upstairs starving to death, while he, good-for-nothing rascal, had been spending their money on drink.

So spoke Aniele, scornfully, and when he started toward the fire she added the information that her kitchen was no longer for him to fill with his phosphate stinks. She had crowded all her boarders into one room on Ona's account, but now he could go up in the garret where he belonged—and not there much longer either if he did not pay her some rent.

Jurgis went without a word, and, stepping over half a dozen sleeping boarders in the next room, ascended the ladder. It was dark up above; they could not afford any light; also it was nearly as cold as outdoors.

In a corner, as far away from the corpse as possible, sat Marija, holding little Antanas in her one good arm and trying to soothe him to sleep. In another corner crouched poor little Juozapas, wailing because he had had nothing to eat all day.

Marija said not a word to Jurgis; he crept in like a whipped cur and went and sat down by the body.

Perhaps he ought to have meditated upon the hunger of the children, and upon his own baseness; but he thought only of Ona, he gave himself up again to the luxury of grief.

He shed no tears, being ashamed to make a sound; he sat motionless and shuddering with his anguish. He had never dreamed how much he loved Ona, until now that she was gone; until now that he sat here, knowing that on the morrow they would take her away, and that he would never lay eyes upon her again—never all the days of his life.

His old love, which had been starved to death, beaten to death, awoke in him again; the flood-gates of memory were lifted—he saw all their life together, saw her as he had seen her in Lithuania, the first day at the fair, beautiful as the flowers, singing like a bird.

He saw her as he had married her, with all her tenderness, with her heart of wonder; the very words she had spoken seemed to ring down in his ears, the tears she had shed to be wet upon his cheek.

The long, cruel battle with misery and hunger had hardened and embittered him, but it had not changed her—she had been the same hungry soul to the end, stretching out her arms to him, pleading with him, begging him for love and tenderness.

Cut Like a Knife

And she had suffered—so cruelly she had suffered, such agonies, such infamies—ah, God, the memory of them was not to be borne. What a monster of wickedness, of heartlessness, he had been! Every angry word that he had ever spoken came back to him and cut him like a knife; every selfish act that he had done—with what torments he paid for them now!

And such devotion and awe as welled up in his soul—now that it could never be spoken, now that it was too late, too late! His bosom was choking with it, bursting with it; he crouched here in the darkness beside her, stretching out his arms to her—and she was gone forever, she was dead!

He could have screamed aloud with the horror and despair of it; a sweat of agony beaded his forehead, yet he dared not make a sound—he scarcely dared to breathe, because of his shame and loathing of himself.

Late at night came Elzbieta, having gotten the money for a mass, and paid it in advance, lest she should be tempted too sorely at home.

She brought also a bit of stale rye bread that someone had given her, and with that they quieted the children and got them to sleep. Then she came over to Jurgis and sat down beside him.

She said not a word of reproach—she and Marija had chosen that course before; she would only plead with him, here by the corpse of his dead wife. Already Elzbieta had choked down her tears, grief being crowded out of her soul by fear.

She had to bury one of her children—but then she had done it three times before, and each time risen up and gone back to take up the battle for the rest.

Elzbieta was one of the primitive creatures: like the angleworm, which goes on living though cut in half; like a hen, which, deprived of her chickens one by one, will mother the last that is left her. She did this because it was her nature—she asked no questions about the justice of it, nor the worthwhileness of life in which destruction and death ran riot.

And this old commonsense view she labored to impress upon Jurgis, pleading with him with tears in her eyes. Ona was dead, but the others were left and they must be saved. She did not ask for her own children. She and Marija could care for them somehow, but there was Antanas, his own son.

Ona had given Antanas to him—the little fellow was the only remembrance of her that he had, he must treasure it and protect it, he must show himself a man. He knew what Ona would have had him do, what she would ask of him at this moment, if she could speak to him.

It was a terrible thing that she should have died as she had; but the life had been too hard for her and she had to go. It was terrible that they were not able to bury her, that he could not even have a day to mourn her—but so it was.

Their fate was pressing; they had not a cent, and the children would perish—some money must be had. Could he not be a man for Ona's sake and pull himself together? In a little while they would be out of danger—now that they had given up the house they could live more cheaply, and with all the children working they could get along, if only he would not go to pieces.

So Elzbieta went on, with feverish intensity. It was a struggle for life with her; she was not afraid that Jurgis would go on drinking, for he had no money for that, but she was wild with dread at the thought that he might desert them, might take to the road, as Jonas had done.

But with Ona's dead body beneath his eyes, Jurgis could not well think of treason to his child. Yes, he said, he would try, for the sake of Antanas. He would give the little fellow his chance—would get work at once, yes, to-morrow, without even waiting for Ona to be buried. They might trust him, he would keep his word, come what might.

And so he was out before daylight the next morning, headache, heartache, and all. He went straight to Graham's fertilizer-mill, to see if he could get back his job. But the boss shook his head when he saw him—no, his place had been filled long ago, and there was no room for him.

No Work for Him.

"Do you think there will be?" Jurgis asked. "I may have to wait."

"No," said the other, "it will not be worth your while to wait—there will be nothing for you here."

Jurgis stood gazing at him in perplexity. "What is the matter?" he asked. "Didn't I do my work?"

The other met his look with one of cold indifference, and answered, "There will be nothing for you here, I said."

Jurgis had his suspicions as to the dreadful meaning of that incident, and he went away with a sinking at the heart. He went and took his stand with a mob of hungry wretches who were standing about in the snow before the time-station.

Here he stayed, breakfastless, for two hours, until the throng was driven away by the clubs of the police. There was no work for him that day.

Jurgis had made a good many acquaintances in his long services at the yards—there were saloonkeepers who would trust him for a drink and a sandwich, and members of his old union who would lend him a dime at a pinch. It was not a question of life and death for him, therefore; he might hunt all day, and come again on the morrow, and try hanging on thus for weeks, like hundreds and thousands of others.

Meantime, Teta Elzbieta would go and beg, over in the Hyde Park district, and the children would bring home enough to pacify Aniele, and keep them all alive.

It was at the end of a week of this sort of waiting, roaming about in the bitter winds or loafing in saloons, that Jurgis stumbled on a chance in one of the cellars of Jones's big packing plant. He saw a foreman passing the open doorway, and hailed him for a job.

"Push a truck?" inquired the man, and Jurgis answered, "Yes, sir!" before the words were well out of his mouth.

"What's your name?" demanded the other.

"Jurgis Rudkus."

"Worked in the yards before?"

"Yes."

"Whereabouts?"

"Two places. Brown's killing beds and Durham's fertilizer-mill."

"Why did you leave there?"

"The first time I had an accident, and the last time I was sent up for a month."

"I see. Well, I'll give you a trial. Come early to-morrow and ask for Mr. Thomas."

Blacklisted!

So Jurgis rushed home with the wild tidings that he had a job—that the terrible siege was over. The remnants of the family had quite a celebration that night; and in the morning Jurgis was at the place half an hour before the time of opening. The foreman came in shortly afterward, and when he saw Jurgis he frowned.

"Oh," he said. "I promised you a job, didn't I?"

"Yes, sir," said Jurgis.

"Well, I'm sorry, but I made a mistake. I can't use you."

Jurgis stared, dumfounded. "What's the matter?" he gasped.

"Nothing," said the man, "only I can't use you."

There was the same cold, hostile stare that he had had from the boss of the fertilizer mill. He knew that there was no use saying a word, and he turned and went away.

Out in the saloons the men could tell him all about the meaning of it; they gazed at him with pitying eyes—poor devil, he was blacklisted! What had he done? they asked—knocked down his boss? Good heavens, then he might have known!

Why, he stood as much chance of getting a job in Packingtown as of being chosen Mayor of Chicago. Why had he wasted his time hunting? They had him on a secret list in every office, big and little, in the place. They had his name by this time in St. Louis and New York, in Omaha and Boston, in Kansas City and St. Joseph.

He was condemned and sentenced, without trial and without appeal; he could never work for the packers again—he could not even clean cattle pens or drive a truck in any place where they controlled. He might try it, if he chose, as hundreds had tried it, and found out for themselves.

He would never be told anything about it; he would never get any more satisfaction than he had gotten just now; but he would always find when the time came that he was not needed.

It would not do for him to give any other name, either—they had company "spotters" for just that purpose, and he wouldn't keep a job in Packingtown three days. It was worth a fortune to the packers to keep their blacklist effective, as a warning to the men and a means of keeping down union agitation and political discontent.

Did You Lose a Baby's Shoe?

One Found in the Street Teaches Timely Lessons

In the middle of the street, on the car tracks the other day, there lay a baby's white kid shoe.

A dozen men at least stopped and looked at it. They gazed solemnly, as you may see men look in at a window where a rabbit is eating lettuce leaves, or up toward the top of a building where an iron safe is swinging.

If there is anything in this world worthy of close editorial attention it is the pathetic little shoe of a young baby. This one belonged to the youngest kind of a baby. It was an almost shapeless bag of kid—white, with a little machine-made embroidery around the top, and four eyelets, two on each side, with a little white shoestring running through them.

The shoe would do for the left foot or the right for almost any very small baby.

Concerning this particular baby's shoe and other shoes we have these things to say:

The mother whose baby lost this shoe is to be congratulated. The losing of the shoe shows that it was not TIED VERY TIGHTLY AROUND THE BABY'S ANKLE.

One mistake that mothers make in dressing their children IS TO HAVE THINGS TIGHT. You need not fasten your baby's shoestrings so that they squeeze the tender flesh in order to keep the shoe from coming off.

The baby's heel and instep will prevent the loss of the shoe even if you tie the laces very loosely around the little ankle.

BUT DON'T TIE THE SHOELACE IN AN ORDINARY BOW-KNOT. The baby's constant kicking and wiggling—ESSENTIAL TO ITS HEALTH—are apt to untie the bow-knot, loosen the strings and shake off the shoe as you cross the street.

Tie the baby's shoestrings in a regular hard knot, but without drawing the knot so tightly that you will have trouble in undoing it.

Especially in this hot weather make sure THAT THERE IS NOTHING TIGHT ON YOUR BABY ANYWHERE.

Be sure that the little sleeves are loose around the wrists and loose around the upper part of the arms.

ABOVE ALL THINGS, BE SURE THAT THE BABY HAS PERFECT FREEDOM AROUND THE NECK.

IT IS A CRIME TO PUT STARCHED LINEN OR COTTON OR ANYTHING STIFF AROUND A BABY'S NECK IN THIS WEATHER. Have everything soft, flimsy. You may not be able to afford the EXPENSIVE soft materials, BUT YOU CAN AT LEAST KEEP OUT THE STARCH. Don't let your own vanity as to your child's appearance subject the child to discomfort.

After you have carried the child in your arms through the street or on the cars, remember that its own weight and your strength TIGHTEN the dress around its body.

The first thing to do is to straighten the baby out, loosen the clothes everywhere, make sure that it has a chance to expand its chest and stomach in breathing.

Put your finger around inside the neckband and make sure that THAT is loose.

YOU SEE EVERY FAT MAN IN THE CAR DOING THAT FOR HIMSELF IN HOT WEATHER. DO IT FOR YOUR BABY. It will be much more uncomfortable than the hottest fat man if you neglect these little things.

One other thing about a baby's shoe: The one in the street was a clean little shoe, with only the least bit of a spot at each end to show that the baby owner is a healthy kicker.

BE SURE TO KEEP THE SHOES OF YOUR BABY CLEAN. DON'T STAND YOUR BABY UP ON A DIRTY FLOOR AND THEN ALLOW THE SHOE TO BE PUT IN THE CHILD'S MOUTH, OR THE LITTLE HANDS THAT HAVE HANDLED THE SHOE TO BE PUT IN THE CHILD'S MOUTH. A LITTLE GASOLINE OR OTHER CLEANSING MATERIAL WILL KEEP THE SHOES CLEAN. They should be cleaned often.

Of the thousands of babies that get tuberculosis at the beginning of their lives, a great number contract the disease by germs that get on their feet from the floors of street cars and ferryboats or germs that get upon their hands when, WORSE STILL, they are allowed to get down on their hands and knees in public places where consumptives may have been scattering germs.

You may say that this is not a very dignified editorial—and it isn't. It will make many of the millions of men that read this newspaper smile compassionately. But that doesn't matter.

We would much rather help the comfort of hundreds of thousands of babies in this hot weather than put through any kind of a rate bill; rather, even, than put out of the United States Senate all the dishonest men that are in it.

The Old Method Having Failed, Why Not Try a New?

Massachusetts Certainly Would Not Be Injured if, for ONCE, She Chose a Man of the People for Governor

For a good many years Massachusetts has been proceeding calmly along the same political way. Once a Commonwealth far ahead of most of the other States in progress, she has continued to stick to the same plans and ideas, much in the same manner that some old-fashioned people continue to wear boots instead of shoes, just because their fathers did.

To-day Massachusetts citizens are awakening to the fact that while they have allowed one class of men and corporations to legislate for them, their old Commonwealth has slowly slipped backwards, politically speaking.

There was a time when a voter in the Bay State could look down, with superiority upon the Quayism of Pennsylvania, the Gormanism of Maryland, the Plattism of New York or the Braytonism of Rhode Island. To-day he has suddenly come to realize that while he has slept, Massachusetts has budded and blossomed into a fit companion of these other States, and that he is ruled by corporation employes as certainly as ever was Pennsylvania by Quay or New York by Platt.

Cleaning out the bought-and-sold Legislature naturally suggests itself to all men as a remedy. But they must go farther.

Massachusetts is becoming tired of seeing nothing done by either her executive or legislative departments except what is ordered by the trusts. She is about ready to revert to POPULAR government and elect a Governor who is not bound by entangling alliances, either political OR business.

P. S.—We do not mean that the people of Massachusetts want to defeat a trust-owned Republican and elect a trust-owned Democrat. What is needed is a man neither of the Guild type nor of those who sail under another party name but represent the same interests. It would not better things to elect a Governor who represented the corporation hirelings who seek, in this State, to control the Democratic party. It might be worse.

A REAL Democrat is needed, a man who is not the candidate of any faction, city or State, not the servant of any machine, nor the tool of any combination of capital.

So-called Democratic "leaders" who hope, in Massachusetts' present predicament, to benefit by substituting THEIR brand of trust-control for the present kind, will do well to take warning. They must stand aside now or be wiped out

THEIR BEAUTIFUL DRUG STORE TAN CAME OUT IN THE WASH

THE STENOGRAPHER

She Favors Early Closing Hours for Callers and Tells How to Get Rid of Late Stayers

By Dorothy Dix

"I OBSERVE," remarked the Bookkeeper, "that the 'Cupid Ten o'Clock Club,' organized by the young women of Enid, who pledged themselves to give their beaux the swift waft out at 10 o'clock, has come to an abrupt end.

"It seems that the bunch of Juliets, when it came to a showdown, didn't have the nerve to break away just when the bung was out of the barrel, and the sweet talk flowing along as mellifluously as New Orleans molasses in June."

"It would have taken courage," admitted the Stenographer.

"Heroism," amended the Bookkeeper, "and as a discourager of matrimony, it's the whole works. Think of a fellow going to see his best girl, with the full intention of asking her to be his'n. He's in a blue funk that makes him wrap his legs round the chair, and the cold perspiration break out all over him, and his Adam's apple swells up to the size of a beer keg in his throat, but finally he screws his courage up to the sticking point, and begins—'Miss Jones—Sally Ann—may I call you Sadie—perhaps, you have noticed that—er—er'——

Interrupted Proposal

"And just then she chips in, 'So sorry, Mr. Smithers, to interrupt you, but it's 10 o'clock, and by the rules of our union, we have to shut up then.'

"D'ye reckon that man would ever get back to the popping the question point again? Not in a thousand years. You can't make love to a girl with one eye on her to see how she's taking it, and the other on the clock to see when your time limit is up."

"Oh, I suppose there will be drawbacks to it," replied the Stenographer, "but any law that would fire out the sitter at 10 o'clock would be hailed with joy and gratitude by millions of women who are beset with bores who come and camp on their parlor chairs until the very clock yawns in their faces.

"A woman might miss an occasional proposal, and she would miss a little of the society of the men who entertain her, but think how many, many weary hours she would miss of the society of those who afflict her.

"Many's the time when a man has squared himself before me, with his feet against the radiator, and his legs sticking out, and reeled off hour after hour the tale of how handsome and fascinating and wonderful he was, that I have felt like ringing up the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Dumb Beasts, and having him forcibly removed.

"And I'm not the only woman that has suffered and been silent under visitations that seemed to stretch out to the crack of doom. But most of us are fixed for the stayer now.

"We have three chairs—one big and cushiony and comfy for the man we would like to have stay; one a little stiffer and a little harder for the man we wish to make a moderate length visit, and another chair that is so hard and angular that it is guaranteed to make corns and abrasions in the course of twenty minutes."

The Man's Mistake

"You don't believe, then, in long visits?" inquired the Bookkeeper.

"Nitsky," returned the Stenographer. "Anybody can be charming for thirty minutes; a few people can be entertaining for an hour, but it takes a spellbinder to even interest you after two hours' steady conversation. The most fascinating people, you will notice, are always on the wing. They fire off a few pyrotechnics and skiddoo.

"A man never makes such a frightful mistake as he does when he thinks to charm a woman by turning on the tap of his small talk and letting it gush over her for two or three hours at a stretch. By the time he goes she's so limp and drowned out that she never wants to see him again."

"But love-making," objected the Bookkeeper. "Surely a woman never gets too much of that."

"Love-making," replied the Stenographer, "is like eating chocolate creams—if you get too much of it, it palls on your palate and sours on your stomach and fills you with disgust. Most of the broken engagements are the result of the Amalgamated Hand-Holders having worked overtime."

"How long ought a man to stay when he goes to call on a girl?" asked the Bookkeeper.

"Well," replied the Stenographer, "the shorter his visit the more anxious she will be to have him repeat it, for I have observed the less people see of us, the more they admire us."
